GENERAL DOUGLAS MacARTHUR

COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF, SOUTHWEST PACIFIC AREA

HEADQUARTERS
FIFTH AIR FORCE
APO 925

19 September, 1943

AG 201.22

SUBJECT: Commendation

TO : Commanding Officer, Fifth Air Force Service Command, APO 925

1. The Lae offensive sharply increased our immediate need for fighter aircraft at a time when over a hundred such aircraft were undergoing erection in the Brisbane area. In few words, the situation was as follows:-

"No matter how fast these fighters could be turned out from a tactical standpoint it could not be fast enough."

2. The action taken by Fifth Air Force Service Command to meet this critical situation resulted in fighter aircraft being erected and delivered at a rate greater than ever before achieved in this theatre, and which exceeded even our most optimistic erection schedule. The speedy delivery of these fighter aircraft contributed directly to the successful conclusion of the Lae campaign.

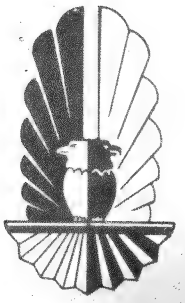

3. I would like to take this opportunity to commend the Fifth Air Force Service Command and all participating personnel for this achievement.

GEORGE C. KENNEY,
Lieutenant General, U.S.A.,
Commanding.

LIEUTENANT-GENERAL GEORGE C. KENNEY

COMMANDING GENERAL, FIFTH AIR FORCE

HEADQUARTERS
FIFTH AIR FORCE SERVICE COMMAND
OFFICE OF THE COMMANDING GENERAL
APO 925

2 May, 1944.

TO : The Officers and Men of the 81st Air Depot Group.

In the past year, the United Nations have moved from the defensive to the offensive. We have dispelled the shadow of early reverses and attained the certainty of victory. This has been true in the SouthWest Pacific no less than in any other theater of the war.

To you men of the 81st belongs a full share of the credit for Fifth Air Force Service Command's magnificent achievements of 1943-44. Although your accomplishments may not have hit the headlines, you have worked with the same determination that inspires the most successful infantry patrol and with the same heroism that burns in the heart of the bravest fighter pilot. Little of glory has been yours, but because you have done your work well, through long hours and against many hardships, you have the far more gratifying reward of knowing that you have contributed in no small measure to Allied air superiority everywhere in the area.

I congratulate every one of you, and have the deepest confidence that you will continue your shining record into the year of victories that lies ahead.

BRIGADIER-GENERAL PAUL H. PRENTISS

COMMANDING GENERAL

FIFTH AIR FORCE SERVICE COMMAND

NOW that movement to a forward area has closed another chapter in the history of the 81st Air Depot Group, it is indeed fitting to record the activities of our organization during its golden age at Eagle Farm. As chance would have it, departure was coincidental with the second anniversary after activation, which should make the average historian rejoice since he can write a natural finish to his book. But it is really with heavy heart that farewell is bid to the mother base of the 81st.

A certain story connected with that Farm will follow us no matter how far north we move. It is a pulsating story written by men and materials on a piece of land taking up but six square miles in vast sub-tropical Australia. It is the story of a thousand men sweating in warehouses; of hundreds in hangars joking, cursing, always working. It is a moving story of Signal-men and radios, of Ordnancemen and guns, of Medics and pills. It's even the story of women and typewriters. But it's a great story of ten thousand hands, five thousand minds, and one purpose—getting planes loaded with bombs to Japan.

It is not the intention of this book to present a complete account of that story. It is hoped, however, that the ensuing pictures of America working in a foreign land will gauge at least the highlights. Much evades the lens, and the pen of the historian has rested with the hope that imagination will make up for its limitations.

COLONEL R. J. MINTY

COMMANDING OFFICER

August 10, 1943 to February 6, 1944

LIEUTENANT-COLONEL R. L. FRY

COMMANDING OFFICER

May 11, 1942 to August 10, 1943

THERE is nothing small about Col. Monay. He is a big man doing a big job in a big way.

Trained in Field Artillery, attached to the engineering section of Quartermaster, then transferred to Air Corps, he now commands the largest Air Depot Group in this theatre if not in the entire U.S. Army. Col. Monay's assignments have been almost as varied as his experiences in the Pacific Area. Leaving Manila three days ahead of the bombs, he joined the Far Eastern Air Force on Mindanao Island. There he assisted in setting up secret airfields and P.T. boat bases. Mindanao was the door through which personnel was evacuated and equipment for Bataan and Corregidor flown in.

While at Mindanao Island, Col. Monay had very distinguished guests at his house for a few days—General and Mrs. MacArthur, their small son, and the president of the Philippines, Manuel Quezon.

To hear him tell his story it all sounds safe and rather tame, but records show that the heat was on all the time. His outfit was cited for outstanding service in action December, 1941, and again by the President in April, 1942. He was wounded and received the Purple Heart.

It was not until the very end that he received orders to evacuate Mindanao, and was on the last plane to leave the island. Landing in Darwin during the days when the worst bombing raids were in progress, they re-fuelled and continued to Cloncurry and later to Melbourne.

In Melbourne, Col. Monay was attached to General Connell's staff and subsequently moved north with him. While serving at this post he was appointed Major, April 10, 1942. He was assigned to the 81st Air Depot Group and came to Eagle Farm May 19, 1942, when, as he says, "The kids were using Hangar No. 1 as a skating rink and Hangar No. 2 was still a horse stable." He is one of the few original officers still serving in the 81st.

Col. Monay's ability to organize and his engineering knowledge were put to a test when he was assigned the task of making an up-to-date airdrome and landing field out of marshland. From buying the land, draining it, clearing it, levelling it, building a runway to accommodate the heaviest bombers, construction of the hangars, Group Headquarters building, supply warehouses, quarters for soldiers, the development of the Allison Overhaul Plant, to building the first test block in Australia, all fell on his shoulders. Today Eagle Farm is the finest airfield in Australia.

In spite of the large part Col. Monay has played in building Eagle Farm, he is always anxious to give credit to others: "The enlisted men of the 81st have done a splendid job working under all kinds of conditions. They deserve the credit. They did the work."

COLONEL WILLIAM H. MONAY

COMMANDING OFFICER, EIGHTY-FIRST AIR DEPOT GROUP

CAPT. J. B. MAYER

GROUP ADJUTANT

Blessed with a magnetic personality and a thundering voice, our Adjutant since August, 1943, has used these attributes to good advantage.

A sparkling sense of humor, left over from his days at Fresno State College, where he was President of the student body and, after graduation, of the Fresno Junior Chamber of Commerce, so blends pleasure with business that even when hard at work he seems to enjoy it. A former Deputy Commissioner of Public Safety and Welfare, Capt. Mayer has brought with him a sincere interest in the common man.

A former enlisted man himself (he jumped from Pvt. to T/Sgt.) he has since graduation from O.C.S. in April, 1943, served in jobs requiring constant contact with men. Conscientiousness and dependability have made him one of our hardest working officers. To the enlisted man he is just a "regular guy."

Talking things over before one of their jeep-tours of inspection are the Group Commander and his Adjutant (then a First Lieutenant).

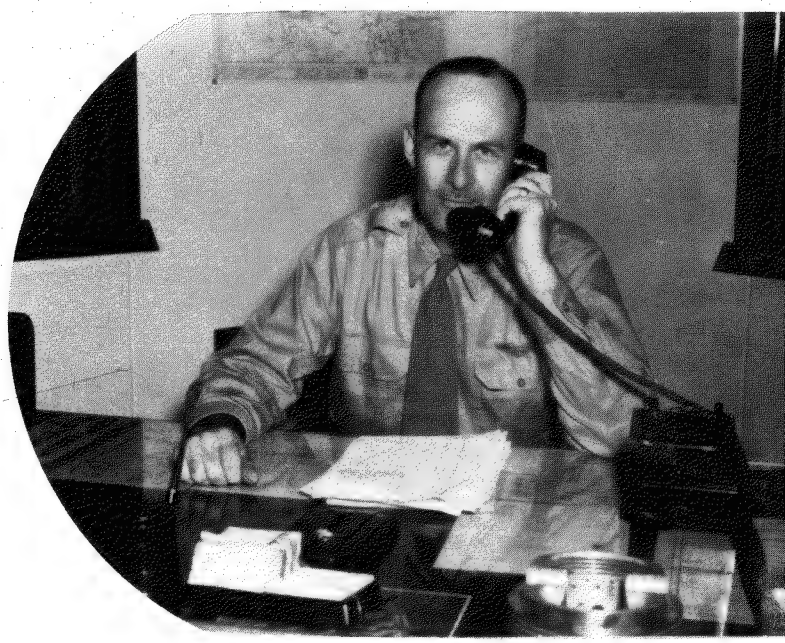

File Section, Group Headquarters: Pfc. Mahoney, Cpl. Alfares, Miss Warlow, Pvt. Larson, Sgt. Marchesini.

MAJOR R. H. BARNES

DEPOT SUPPLY OFFICER

The oldest pilot on the field (he was teaching rookies the "how" way back in 1918) yet one of the most energetic is our Supply Officer.

Depot Supply Officers: Capt. Trumbull, Capt. Attwood, Lt. Claus, Major Barnes, Capt. Brighton, Lt. Young, Capt. Sullivan.

Interest in his work is supplanted only by his love for crowds after duty hours, when his enthusiasm and vitality put younger men to shame. His consistently amiable disposition has made him one of our more popular officers. When things are shaping according to plan his favorite expression is: "I swear to goodness," but if ever he says: "I'll be a suck-egg mule!" just run as fast as you can because he's on the warpath.

A voluminous speaker, the Major, a graduate in law of Ohio State University, is also an ardent business man. As executive of the largest department in the Group, he has built supply to handle an annual turnover of 130,000 requisitions. His motto: "Anything from grass skirts to bomber engines: we have 'em!"

Supply Section, Group Headquarters.

MAJOR D. D. STEELE

ENGINEERING OFFICER

When Pearl Harbor was infamously attacked, Major Steele (then a Lieutenant) was in Manila with a P-40 squadron. During the next few weeks he made 72 operational flights and shot down two Zeros in combat.

This was the culmination of many years of training begun when he learned to fly while getting his degree in mechanical engineering at the University of Akron. In January, 1942, he flew from the Philippines to Australia and, after serving with the 5AFSC (where he was promoted to Major), took over the job of 81st A.D.G. Engineering Officer in September, 1943, with responsibility for the erection, modification and maintenance of all planes on the field.

He has a high opinion of the abilities of the men in his command and, although a "hard boss" when there's work to be done, his fairness has gained him the utmost of obedience and respect. He was one of the first officers to succumb to the Australian Cupid.

Engineering Office, Group Headquarters.

MAJOR J. SLINGERLAND

PROVOST MARSHAL

The commander of the M.P.'s—tough-guys of the airbase—is himself mild-voiced and peaceable, his career showing the unusual combination of simultaneous academic and military interests.

Guard Mount at Eagle Farm: Sgt. Reiner, Cpl. Eisterhold, Cpl. Neve, T/5 Scigalski, Pvt. Mollenkopf, Pvt. Crisp, Pfc. Mierzwa, Pvt. Slusser, Pvt. Michelman, T/4 Schule.

While a student at the country's foremost colleges (he attended Stanford and Harvard and received a Bachelor of Laws degree from the University of Minnesota in 1927), and later while an accountant in Minneapolis, he was for nineteen years in the Army Reserve and held a commission in the Field Artillery.

Toward the end of 1940 he was called to active service in the rank of captain and, arriving in Australia three months after Pearl Harbor, was assigned to northern outposts and then to the islands. After the war the Major intends to return to the calm life of our northern lake region, but while in the army he sticks by his M.P.'s with the assertion: "We won't take a back seat for anybody!"

Provost Marshal's Office, Group Headquarters: T/5 Cavanagh, Sgt. Kelley, Major Slingerland, Pvt. L. D. Reinhardt.

MAJOR E. C. KARST

SIGNAL OFFICER

Went to work at eighteen for Bell Telephone of New Jersey, and climbed up the pole until he reached the position of wire-chief, responsible for some 75,000 stations in the heart of the State.

Then after twenty years of buzzes and busy signals, he pulled a silver bar off the G.I. merry-go-round in June, 1942, and six months later was in command of a company. Frequent parties, swims, and ball-games, and untiring efforts to help his "boys" out of any and all difficulties, have gained him their respect as a friend and a shrewd leader.

In August, 1943, he came to Australia and organized the largest and most efficient Signal-Aviation Depot in this theatre. A clever man, quick to grasp situations, he is at heart a sentimentalist, fond of puppy-dogs and old memories, who wants his troops to treat him as though he really were their "old man." His favorite expressions: "Say it again, Charlie!" "This is IT, men!"

Signal Section, Group Headquarters.

CAPT. K. S. URQUHART

CHAPLAIN

Everything about our tall, athletic, heavily-tanned Chaplain points to the fact that he is a philosophical man-of-action who believes that manual as well as mental labor is good.

ON THE ROOF: Chaplain Urquhart building the Fourth & Fifth Graders' Club at Eagle Farm.

After working his way through St. Stephen's College and the Nashotah School of Theology, he took a run-down parish in New York, and worked for twelve years to rebuild it both physically and spiritually. In April, 1942, he joined the Army and ten months later was assigned to the 81st, starting with nothing except the driving desire to help others. Hammer in hand, he built his own chapel and an N.C.O. Club for the benefit of the enlisted men on the post.

His favorite occupations are "reading and helping the boys." When an enlisted man once asked where his office was located our Chaplain pointed at the sky. The man proceeded to tell his troubles at the lumber yard.

Getting the lay of the land at the 81st Advanced Base in New Guinea.

CAPT. C. L. SEYFRIED

ORDNANCE OFFICER

Affable, quiet to the point of reticence, the Captain, an authority on guns, is at his desk most evenings working on the various problems that confront the head of the Ordnance Section.

He is vested with the task of seeing that the cannon and guns are in good working order, that the supply of ammunition is uninterrupted, that the vehicles are transhipped on schedule. Formerly a Company Commander, Captain Seyfried has not lost interest in the welfare of the men under him and he forever worries about them.

A native of Brooklyn, and a graduate of New York University in 1928, he worked for the Squibb Laboratories as engineer and draftsman until the Army "drafted" him in April, 1941, with a First Lieutenant's commission and soon thereafter gave him command of an Ordnance Company at Mitchel Field, New York. Since his arrival in this theatre he has seen eleven months' service in New Guinea.

Ordnance Property Section at the Group Headquarters.

Ordnance Section, Group Headquarters: Miss Coe, S/Sgt. Wiesenfeld, Capt. Seyfried, Lt. Anderson, Miss Kelly, Cpl. Bowdish.

CAPT. S. M. WATSON

CHEMICAL OFFICER

The short officer sits quietly behind his desk in a corner of the Headquarters Building, or walks slowly through the warehouse, doing his work thoroughly but without fanfare.

He speaks with the unhurried softness traditionally expected of Georgians. In reply to direct questions, you learn that he worked for the Agricultural Adjustment Administration after getting his Bachelor of Science degree from the University of Georgia, that he taught school for a year, and entered the Army as a Second Lieutenant in September, 1940.

His job is to direct the supply of all materials necessary for offensive and defensive chemical warfare. Note his twenty-seven months' overseas and ask opinions of Australia: the Captain will tilt his chair back slightly, a smile will grow and take shape, and he will laugh softly, leaving you to guess at his thoughts.

C.W.S. Office, Group Headquarters: S/Sgt. Cadwell, Pvt. Kling, Capt. Watson.

CAPT. K. E. COX

GROUP SURGEON

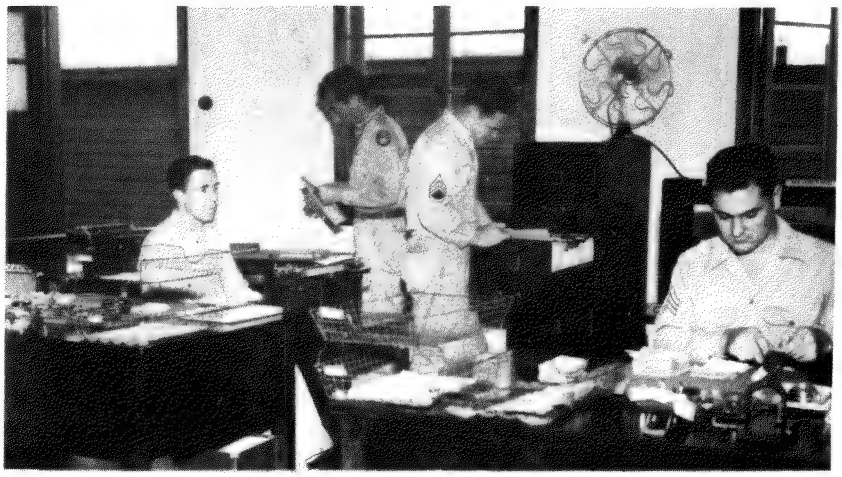

By all rights his connection with the "Air Forces" should be dated from well before December, 1942, when he joined the 81st, for he has long been a member of the oldest of ground crews—for the stork.

Specialist training with the medical detachment of the University of Kansas was completed in 1934, and after eight years at the home base and on D.S. in the east he was commissioned a Captain. He came to Australia by air and served with the 81st as Squadron Surgeon until March 28, 1944, when he succeeded Major King as Group Surgeon.

Despite that professional appearance of "high seriousness" he enjoys a good time, and has helped produce many successful parties as president of the Officers' Club. His distinguishing feature from the private's eye view is that despite lengthy exposure he has contracted none of the diseases collectively labelled "G.I."

First Nurses assigned to the Group: Lt. Juanita Bolt, Lt. Betty Hall (chief nurse), and Lt. Mary Kravitz.

Medical Headquarters: Cpl. Leib, Cpl. Groger, S/Sgt. Meehan, Sgt. Jochems.

LT. H. P. KELLER

TRANSPORTATION OFFICER

A typical, good-natured, easy-going, pipe-smoking Southerner with a soft voice which frequently speaks firm convictions.

W.N.E.L's-drivers of Group staff cars: Misses Jekyll, Lewis, Monkhouse, Caine, MacDonald (Sgt.), Burke, Arden, Harrison, Izatt.

He was an accountant in civilian life and has no trouble "keeping up" with his two-hundred civilian and G.I. drivers. Volunteering for service in June, 1942, he was graduated from O.C.S. at Miami six months later, and was assigned to the 44th Depot Repair Squadron, where he was appointed Adjutant and Squadron Mess and Supply Officer.

Since becoming Group Transportation Officer in January, 1944, Lt. Keller has consolidated the many scattered motor pools into one Group Pool and instituted written (in addition to practical) tests for drivers. He can boast of a record which includes no major accidents, very few minor. Favorite sport is hunting.

Transportation Office, Group Headquarters: Miss Nightingale, Lt. Keller.

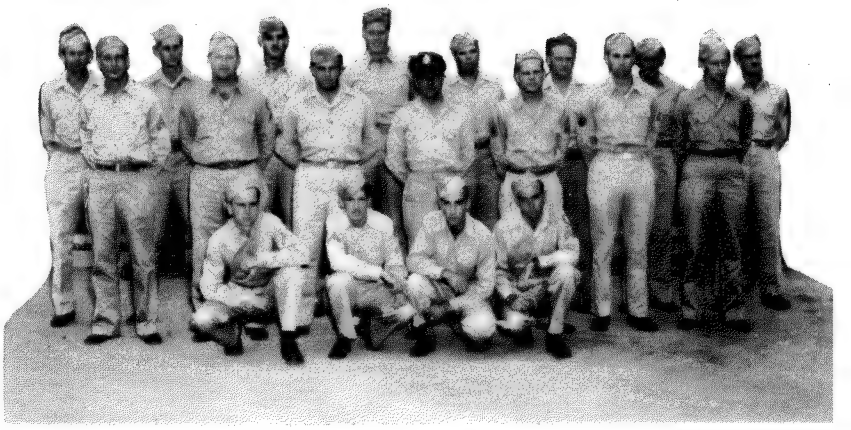

LT. D. K. ANDERSON

UTILITIES & CONSTRUCTION OFFICER

One of the few 81st officers who can boast of eighteen years in the Army with experience from Private to Master Sergeant and Warrant Officer before receiving a direct commission.

After studying industrial engineering at Armour Technical Institute, "Andy" got his uniform in 1925 from an Engineers' Supply Room and joined the Air Corps three years later. He was the first enlisted man assigned to the 81 A.D.G., serving as mechanic, crew chief, and line chief. Because of his outstanding work he was promoted to First Lieutenant from W/O in May, 1943.

His job has brought him into direct contact with many Australian workers, and he says of this country: "I like the people in it. It has wonderful potentialities and chances for a lot of development." But when it's all over he would like to finish his time in the Army (in the U.S.A.) and retire to "do a lot o' fishin'."

LT. F. W. LUCTERHAND

PERSONNEL OFFICER

When he hands out a long, complicated project to be accomplished, he leans back in his chair, slaps at his desk, and says with a broad grin: "How aboot that?"

Personnel Section, Advanced Base: Pfc. Mallon, Pfc. Burruss, Lt. Lucterhand, S/Sgt. O'Connor, Cpl. Talon, Sgt. Steger, Pvt. Cohen, Pvt. Fryer.

Diligent and quiet, although loquacious and friendly, with an effervescent smile at a party and frequently at work. Joined the Air Corps January, 1942, and skipped lightly through the various ranks to M/Sgt. before O.C.S., from which he was graduated May, 1943. Before joining the Army was manager of a large five-and-ten cent store, and studied business administration nights.

His interests now are getting men paid on time, keeping all personnel records up to date, and keeping men on the jobs for which they are qualified. He sticks by his guns and his men, and has done many things to favor the enlisted men unknown to them. Is best liked by those who know him well.

Personnel Section, Group Headquarters.

LT. M. R. HICKS

CIVILIAN PERSONNEL OFFICER

From teaching of geo-politics to the making of history would be the best characterization of Lt. Hicks' varied career since he left his class in Houston in 1942.

Teacher tactics are still applied in his kindly ways. Undergraduate study at Sam Houston State Teachers' College and an M.S. degree from Houston University have given him excellent training in relationship with people. As Classification Officer, Lt. Hicks was well liked by the military personnel; then many friendships were made when he took over the job of Civilian Personnel Officer.

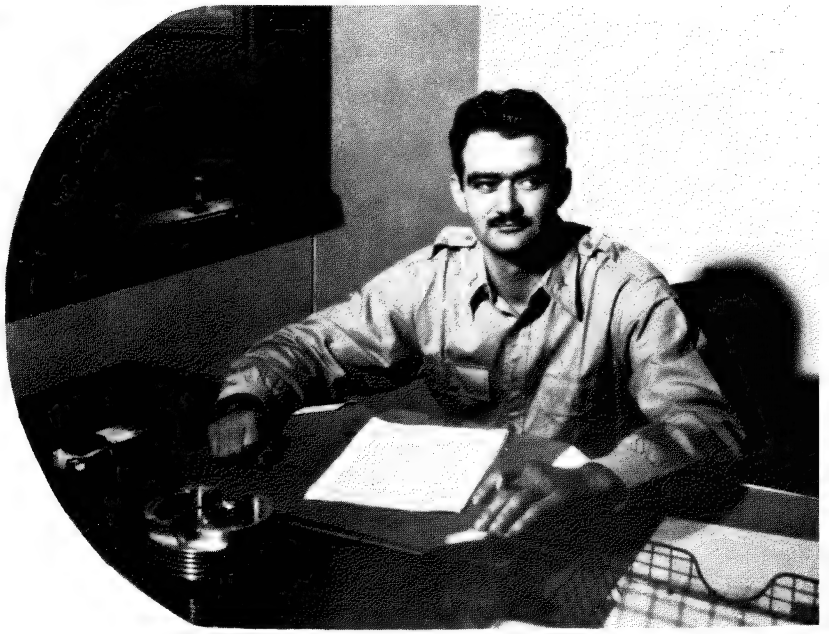

As Historical Officer he has made it possible for his staff to operate efficiently through whole-hearted cooperation. Though an added function requiring extra work, this officer has never tired of getting his men all the facilities and allowing them to show their own initiative. A type of man who usually evokes the phrase: "He's a good Joe."

Civilian Personnel Office, Group Headquarters: Lt. Hicks, Mrs. Page (Secretary).

Civilian Personnel Section, Group Headquarters.

LT. R. M. CLARK

STATISTICAL CONTROL OFFICER

Lt. Clark's birthplace, Dallas, gave him tall stature, fine features and jet black hair. The army went one better giving him a silver bar and Citation Device with two Oak Leaf Clusters, and a pretty important job.

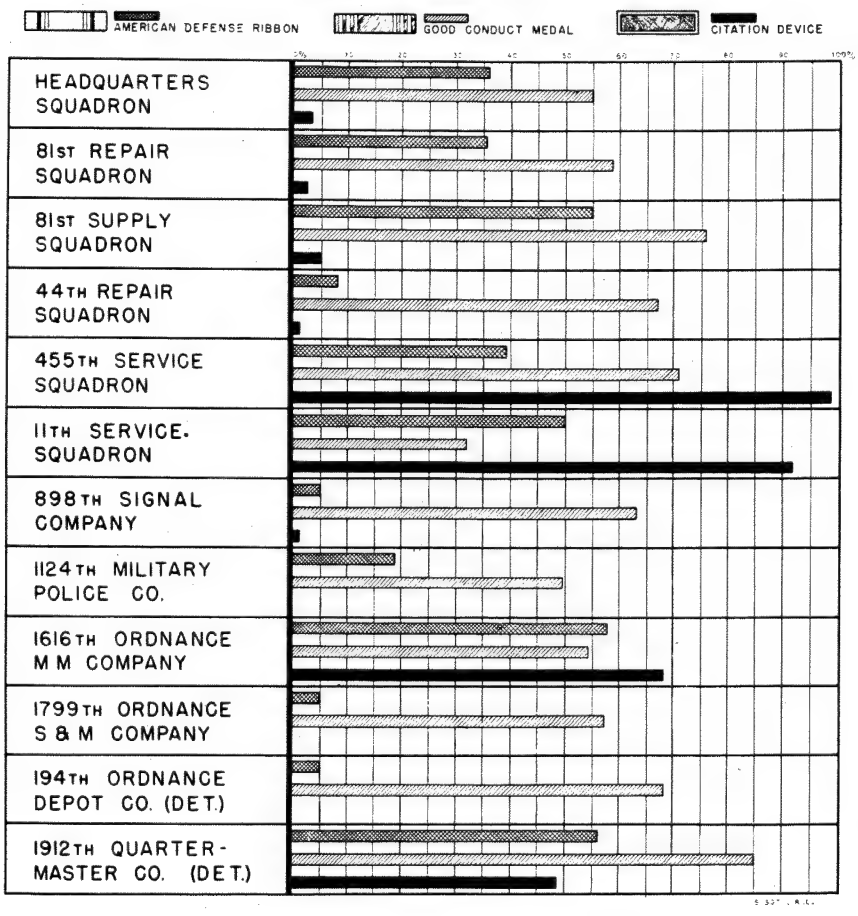

Statistical Control Office: Pvt. Grainer, Sgt. Luck, Cpl. Todd.

One of the few seasoned soldiers when he entered the army early in 1942, Cpl. Clark was recommended for O.C.S. in June, 1942, and made it almost blindfolded, his attendance of Kemper Military Academy coming in good stead. After graduation as 2nd Lieutenant in July, 1942, from a Statistical Control course he was much in demand since the G.I. circus carried few mathematicians on its trapeze.

September 1, 1942, he was shipped overseas to help figure the shortest route to victory, and February 4, 1943, was assigned to Headquarters, 81st A.D.G. Lt. Clark needs little praise, and asks for less. Still, his enlisted personnel cannot refrain from an evaluation:—he is a swell fellow. To tell what his Australian wife says of him would be divulging domestic secrets.

HEADQUARTERS ★ ★ ★ SQUA

From a cadre of two officers and fifteen enlisted men dispersed in a foreign city, to a compact group of 16 officers and 150 enlisted men directing the activities of nearly 3,500 personnel, both military and civilian, and known throughout the Southwest Pacific for its accomplishments, the Squadron developed in record time. Far from the temporary set-up of a year ago, when it was spread over the "Valley," the Headquarters offices had become unified under one huge roof situated in the center of a throbbing airbase. Attached and assigned services —Chemical, Ordnance, Medical, Signal—had filled their T/O's at the time of consolidation and began operating as an integral part of the Group.

1st Sgt. Freeman, Cpl. Madigan, Cpl. Bedian, M/Sgt. Guthrie, orderly room tacticians.

On October 27, 1943, Headquarters Squadron moved from the Ward Motors Building, where it had been since organization in May of 1942, to a new camp site at Eagle Farm. Here the men were quartered in huts resembling one story barracks made of salvaged airplane crates, Australian lumber and pre-fabricated material. The muddy area was filled in, a boardwalk built, and the main road graded and packed down, which eliminated in a short time a great deal of the dampness. The name "Mosquito Junction," painted in bold letters at the entrance to the orderly room, was intended as a memorial to the conditions existing before the Squadron moved in because the layer-base of the groundman's flying gremlin was blitzed with destruction of the swamp.

A vacant civilian house was converted into a day room and decorated with original paintings by one of the members of the unit. Furnishings, matching curtains draped on the windows, lent a homely atmosphere to the place where men relaxed after the day's work, listened to the radio, read, and wrote home. Twice weekly, evenings were spent drinking beer out of canteen cups. On other alternate nights movies were shown in conjunction with the 81st Supply Squadron. With monthly parties and dances supplementing the above activities not much more was required to keep the morale high.

Several men rose from the ranks during the course of the year. Warrant-Officer D. K. Anderson was appointed First Lieutenant. Two Staff Sergeants received direct commissions as Second Lieutenants and five enlisted men attained similar ranks through Officer Candidate School. Aviation Cadet School claimed three men who were returned to the United States for training. The same number of men over 38 years of age was sent back to our "dreamland" after aging overseas for 1½ years to be transferred to the Enlisted Reserve Corps and to resume civilian life.

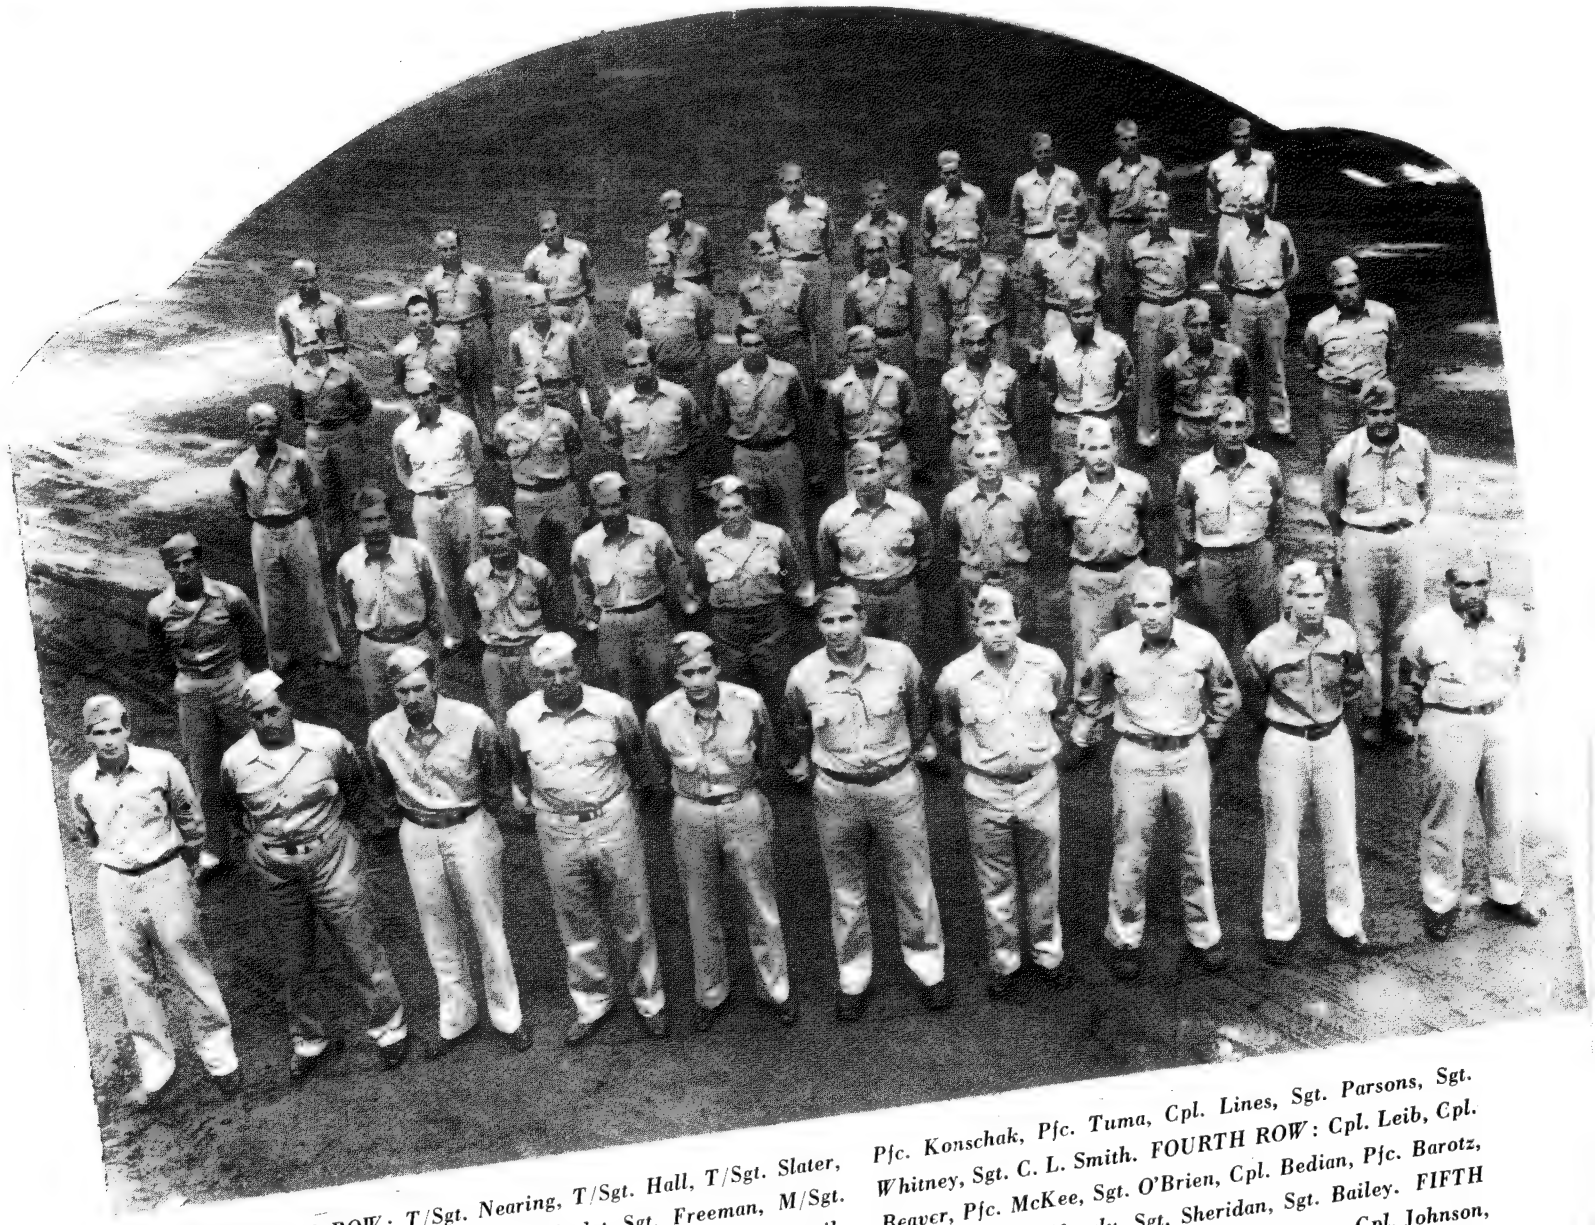

Capt. Von Wald replacing Capt. Frazier as Squadron Commander, September 28, 1943.

Constant alteration is the lot of any army unit. This Squadron, however, has undergone enough revolutionary changes to suffice any member for the duration, let alone for one year. Commands of both Group and Squadron changed hands numerous times, personnel were rotated, location was moved. Then came a calm that usually brings with it contentment and a feeling that for a time at least there will be no movement. But fate decreed otherwise. Towards the end of April, 1944, the 81st Air Depot Group, comprising four squadrons and attached units, was ordered north. The short notice was just sufficient for the organization to stop all work and pack up overnight. The Headquarters Squadron embarked on April 21st, accompanied by part of the other units, as an advanced detail to start the 81st on its initial travels along the forward areas and the wilds of New Guinea.

Eighty-first DEPOT

THE 81st Depot Repair Squadron looks upon the Eagle Farm airbase as its own baby, reared to a vigorous manhood by the labor and enthusiasm of the Squadron's enlisted men and officers. Two months after the Coral Sea battle ended all Jap hopes of an Australian conquest, men forming the nucleus of the 81st were sent from the south to establish a new major base. Awaiting them were two short airstrips and two small ill-equipped hangars.

In August, 1942, lacking many tools and using power supplied by a few one-cylinder engines, they assembled the first P-38's to arrive in this theatre. They have since had the rare pleasure of seeing their work produce victories. This was particularly true of the modification of armament on the B-25 carried on under the supervision of Lt.-Col. "Pappy" Gunn. Planes, improved here by the installation of .50 caliber nose guns, played a decisive role in the Bismarck Sea battle and were referred to as follows in Lt.-General Kenney's commendation: "The effectiveness of the forward fire of the airplanes making the low level attacks on the Japanese convoy is ample testimony of the skillful workmanship of the personnel responsible for the design and installation of the forward firing fixed guns in these airplanes." This achievement is doubly impressive when we remember that all work had to be done on a strict schedule, night and day, rain and shine, that men worked ten, twelve, and twenty hour stretches without days off.

As men and equipment were being sent in greater numbers to this theatre, both the Squadron and its field increased in size and importance. From a two-strip, two-hangar base, Eagle Farm came to house the biggest Air Depot Group in Australia, with three strips, nine hangars, and a large machine-shop building. The 81st Repair Squadron grew from 200 to 460 men, each a skilled technician, and still other organizations had to be attached to take care of the tremendous volume of work assigned this depot. This work is the assembly and modification of all types of fighter aircraft for this theatre. While essentially "safe" ground work, it has its dangers and has produced sorrows as well as joys. Deepest of these was the loss on July 17, 1943, of Major Donald Simpson, Squadron Commander, and Capt. Paul May and Lt. James Handley, test pilots. In the course of "routine" work they had flown three P-38's to a nearby field and were returning in an A-20 when the fatal accident occurred. They were given full military honors in the presence of the entire Squadron under a sky in which flew a formation of P-38's with three empty positions. The job of C.O. was taken over by Major Forrest Harsh, and, in October, 1943, by Captain William O. Farrior, who had been with the 81st for over a year as test pilot.

S/Sgt. Doyle issuing clothing in his supply room at Eagle Farm.

The 81st men are not noted for adherence to Ben Franklin's adage about the healthy, wealthy, and wise. When projects had to be rushed, they worked very hard, went to bed at odd hours, and slept very little. When the pace was eased they made sure to take advantage of all possible recreational facilities. Numerous Squadron parties were held on the base and at the Non-Commissioned Officers' Club in the city, and on special occasions the men were treated by their officers to steak fries and boisterous beer parties. As was to be expected, however, the biggest boost in spirit was when the first four men went to the States on the rotation plan.

The work of the 81st Repair Squadron was no small factor in the Allied advance northwards. As the front line was pushed up, more large bases were required closer to the scene of operations, and the mission of the Squadron in Australia was completed. In April, 1944, the 81st was sent north to begin again the saga of army pioneering and achievement which will soon eliminate all rotation plans.

CAPT. JOHN C. ATTWOOD,
Squadron Commander, appointed Assistant Depot Supply Officer, April, 1944.

81ST DEPOT SUP

THE past year has seen rapid development of unity and efficiency in the Supply Squadron. This has helped to facilitate the procurement and shipping of supplies, making more useful to the forward areas the valuable work for which the Group was so well known.

By August, 1943, four large 40,000 sq. foot warehouses were in use at Eagle Farm. However, the Depot had to retain all of its previously procured warehouses off the field because of the increasing volume of Air Corps Supplies to be stored in this area. The Squadron was by then operating 28 warehouses. In October, 1943, the men moved their quarters from Warehouse No. 6, joining the rest of the Group at Eagle Farm near the Group Headquarters, thus further unifying both the Group and the Squadron. For the first time since activation, administrative departments were moved under one roof at the Group Headquarters building where the Stock Records Section now occupied the most prominent and largest part of the big structure. Business hereto carried on by letter and telephone was speeded by personal contact, and a great deal of red tape eliminated.

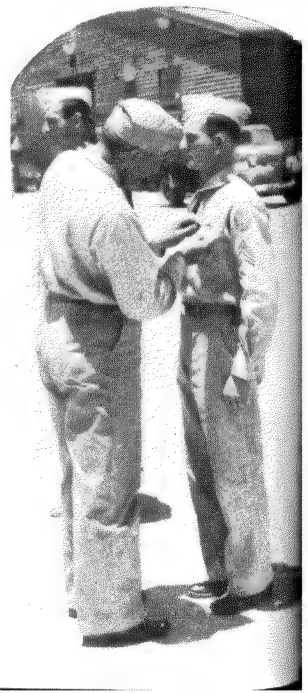

In June, 1943, the Supply Section was employing more than a thousand civilians. Throughout the year comparatively low ranking enlisted men supervised the civilian employees and did a fine job. On an average, one soldier supervised the work of ten civilians.

Commencing in September, 1943, the 81st Air Depot Group assumed responsibility for operating Depot No. 1, and, in fact, used "5 A.F.S.C., Depot No. 1" on its letterheads. Gradually, however, the Group was relieved of providing stocks for the entire theatre. Still the volume of work did not decrease in the Squadron which operated all supply houses for the Group. The demands of the Depot No. 1 Engineering and Production Control Sections were constantly increasing. Furthermore, paper work necessary in ordering, receiving, checking, re-packing and re-shipping increased due to the fact that Production and Control Section requisitioned all parts and accessories through Depot No. 1.

Several Squadron parties were held at the N.C.O. Club, and movies were shown three times weekly. The Squadron softball team played nightly games during the league elimination contests, and won the championship of the Group.

September 24, 1943, a commendation was received from Col. Minty, upon recommendation of the C.O. of the R.A.A.F., for completing the transfer of hangars from a city 425 miles distant from Eagle Farm in record time. Another example of initiative was the invention of S/Sgt. Dodsworth—a portable electricity producing unit and portable machine shop. These are light enough to be towed by jeeps. In the jungles, this equipment has proved invaluable in repairing planes. In the forward base they are proving great assets and are saving many man-hours of hard labor.

Capt. Paul E. Sullivan, who had been Asst. D.S.O., was appointed Squadron Commander on 8th April, 1944. Capt. J. C. Attwood became Asst. D.S.O. It is hoped that the Squadron will be able to perform its work in the advanced area as well as it has at the Farm, where it was considered more of an institution than an organization.

Supply, that is their line. True, they can't boast the sumptuous warehouses of former days at the Farm, but theirs is still a giving rather than a receiving.

They built and operate a mess hall that feeds their own Squadron plus Headquarters Squadron and the 44th Repair.

The cooks up there have to contend with more than enlisted men's complaints. There is bad weather, and often the stoves become cranky.

44TH ★ DEPOT RE

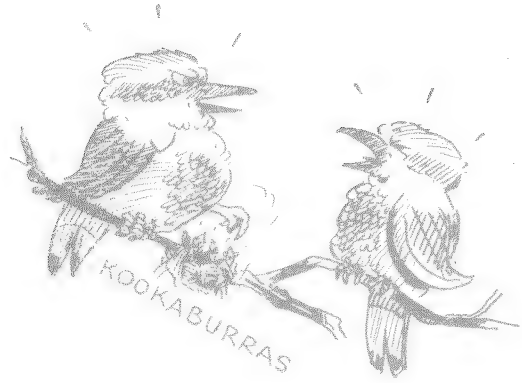

SINCE arriving in this theatre on the 14th of June, 1943, the 44th Depot Repair Squadron has taken an active part in the assembly and repair of aircraft. Having been trained in a dozen different specialists' schools in the States, plus four months' practical training in a Depot in Mobile, Alabama, the 44th was well qualified on arrival, and its leaders have assumed responsibilities here in many key positions.

Paper work at San Antonio Air Depot, Texas, officially activated the organization February 7th, 1942. Accumulation of personnel was started at Patterson Field March, 1942. The group was moved to Springfield, Illinois, April 21, 1942, for basic and technical training, and it was from this station that men were sent to the various technical schools. With the completion of the training of most of the members, the group was moved to Mobile, Alabama, for advanced basic and overseas training, as well as the practical work in the Airdrome and Tech. Supply divisions of Brookley Field.

During the training in Mobile, the 44th first had its taste of success. The civilians employed at the Depot refused to work nights; and because they were afraid of losing their jobs refused to train the soldiers. The soldiers were put on the night shift and "jumped production 50 per cent in two weeks, and within a month, 100 per cent." The civilians decided to go back to work nights, and the strike was broken. But the 44th had earned its reputation, and had gained self-confidence and valuable training.

During the selecting necessary to get a good organization of the various skills needed in a repair squadron, many officers and enlisted men were transferred in and out. Major Bowen joined the organization 20th October, 1942, as Commanding Officer, and later the additional officers assigned to the 44th were selected at Mobile—with the exception of Lts. McMaster and Meding, who were assigned in this theatre. 1st Sgt. Jacobson was appointed in January, 1943.

The first serious accident of the Squadron occurred on 17th July, 1943, to Lt. Wallace, who was flying on a routine test flight with Major Simpson, Lt. Handley and Capt. May. Lt. Wallace was badly injured, but was the only one to recover, and is now back on duty. The first death in the Squadron was that of Lt. Willis S. Schmidt, Test Pilot, on 20th October, 1943.

The Squadron initiated construction of the Fourth and Fifth Graders' Club buildings, and had a large membership in the Groups' Non-Com Clubs. A member organized the Group newspaper, "DEPO ECHO." The men have worked 18-20 hours a day for weeks on end in the hangars, where they have filtered into nearly every department with initiative, leadership and comradeship. This is ample proof that the 44th Repair Squadron has proved itself an outstanding organization.

THE SERVICE

AMONG the men who enriched the American tradition with their sacrifices in the Philippine Islands were those of the Seventh Materiel Squadron. The name and spirit of this organization were bestowed on the men who now comprise the 455th Service Squadron: they upheld the honor well, both in Australia and near enemy lines in New Guinea. Their work for seventeen months in forward areas, during which time they experienced over one hundred high-altitude bombing attacks, was specifically commended by Major-General Ennis C. Whitehead, then Deputy Commander of the Fifth Air Force. In a letter to the Commanding Officer, 455th Service Squadron, dated May 10, 1943, he says: "The accomplishment of this Squadron in providing service facilities for the tactical units operating from this area in the early days of the war is without equal. The fact that your Squadron achieved such results in spite of the handicap of under-strength, in spite of the poor living conditions and poor diet, and in spite of the fact that the enemy made life quite miserable is worthy of the greatest commendations. . . . To the officers and enlisted men of the 455th Service Squadron I extend my congratulations for your wonderful performance and recognition of services rendered beyond the usual call of duty."

Most of the 455th men came to the Southwest Pacific Theatre in the earliest days of the war and were soon sent to New Guinea under the command of Major R. R. Barden. It was a time when trained troops were much in need, and they were transferred from one field to another as required by the military situation. They were at Jackson Field during the well-known Fourth of July "celebration" in 1942, when the Japanese bombed the base continually for three successive days and nights, and while at Durand Airdrome they were at one time only fifteen miles from advanced enemy units. The 455th played an important role in the fights which halted the Japanese advance on Port Moresby and pushed them out of Papua. In October, 1942, the organization settled down at Port Moresby. Originally a detachment of 115 men, it had by then doubled its roster by absorbing personnel from other service squadrons and from replacement depots. For its work on the island the entire Squadron was cited for the Papuan campaign and several of its members received individual awards. The Purple Heart was awarded to Major Barden for action during air attacks. T/Sgt. Ziolko was awarded the Soldier's Medal for saving two Australian soldiers from drowning in shark-infested waters. While at Port Moresby, command was assumed on May 25, 1943, by Major Charles A. Spears, Jr.

After a year of servicing airfields in the Port Moresby area, the 455th Service Squadron, comprising 208 men and six officers, departed for Australia on October 19, 1943, and upon arrival was assigned to the 81st Air Depot Group at Eagle Farm Airdrome. Seventeen months in New Guinea had been quite a check on the men's social ambitions, and they did not wait long before entering the "social whirl" with Squadron parties at the Non-Commissioned Officers' Club in the Valley. The new amusements had, however, to be laid aside early in December, when men of the 455th Engineering Section worked long hours of concentrated effort with personnel of the 81st A.D.G. to erect and modify Thunderbolts then in special demand for the big offensives which pushed the enemy northward.

On the 26th of April Major Spears was transferred to Headquarters U.S.A.S.O.S. and Captain Dennis S. Rego assumed command.

In the first two months of operation of the Rotation Plan the 455th sent home 18 men, each of whom had seen meritorious service for many months in this theatre. Eventually it is hoped that the entire personnel will return to the States and to other theatres to carry on in the 455th tradition of service "beyond the usual call of duty."

11TH SERVICE SQ.

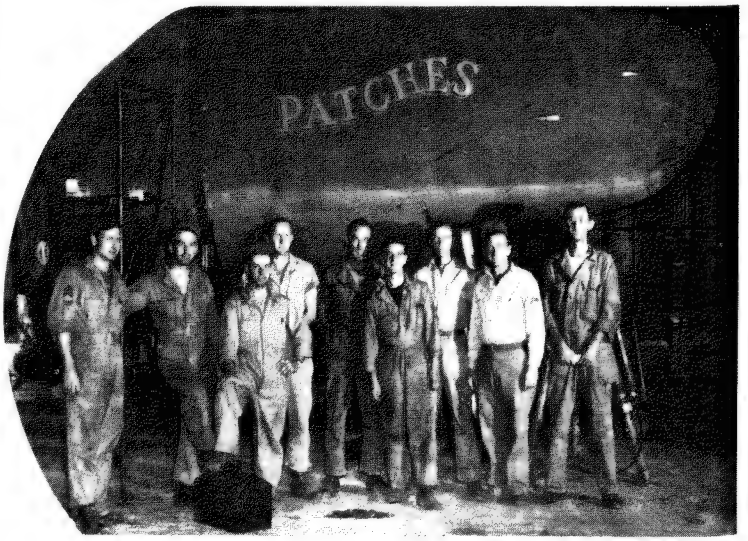

THE 11th Service Squadron originated at Langley Field, Va., 17th January, 1941, as the 11th Materiel Squadron. It moved to Bangor, Maine, took part in manoeuvres in North Carolina, and went back to Maine before embarking for overseas in February, 1942. Landing in Australia ill trained due to the large number of replacements assigned a few days prior to embarkation, a program of basic courses was instituted. During the stay at Bankstown Airdrome, the 11th was performing 1st, 2nd and 3rd echelon maintenance of aircraft. Inexperienced men worked side by side with skilled mechanics and received valuable training and experience, which was to serve them well when the test came in New Guinea.

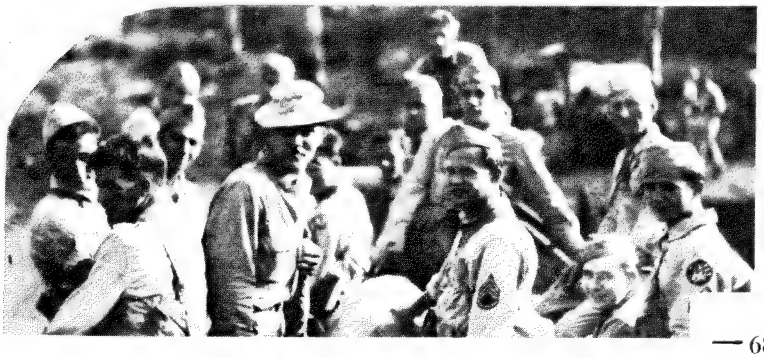

The 11th Materiel Squadron left Bankstown in July, 1942, for Port Moresby, where they were assigned to the 8th Service Group. Many humorous stories could be told about the first air raid—men trying to dig shelters with helmets and knives, attempting to crowd into shallow slit trenches, lying on top of each other; but this was the first and only raid that caught them unprepared. The name of the Squadron was changed to the 11th Service Squadron on 4th August, 1942.

During the first months sleep was a rare luxury and food was scarce, but in spite of these conditions the 8th Service Group did all the work of establishing and maintaining the landing strips in the Moresby area. Men from the 11th were engaged in gas servicing, repair, maintenance and salvage of aircraft, also in the construction of roads, runways and revetments at eight different airdromes.

Going on one of the missions meant a few days or even months of hardship. Tools were scarce, working conditions were the worst possible, and often the men had to depend on friendly natives for food and help in transporting materials. All of these jobs required a great deal of ingenuity and determination. One officer and six enlisted men, together with an Australian officer, were flown to an airstrip to repair planes which had been forced down 40 miles from the small strip. When the job was done the crew and remaining natives cut and pulled grass to clear the strip so that the plane could be flown out.

The most difficult job ever undertaken by this organization was the repair of an aircraft near which two fragmentation or "daisy cutter" bombs had exploded. The wings and fuselage were holed in several places, a good part of the electrical system was shot out, all windows were blown out, and a fire started in the tail end of the fuselage which burned away several square feet of skin, ruined one bulkhead, damaged three others, and weakened several structural members before it could be extinguished. The overall repair time was thirty days. The ship was then flown to Melbourne by Capt. Edwards, Engineering Officer, and his Co-pilot, Lt. McCluney. Both officers have since been awarded the Air Medal for this accomplishment.

Col. Bradford A. Shaw, former Commanding Officer of the 8th Service Group, said at a Squadron party: "We worked fourteen to eighteen hours a day necessary to get airplanes back in commission so that they could go out again and again to strike Rabaul and Buna and Lae and pin the Nip down. We worked and sweated and cursed and took the raps together through the dark days when it seemed all was lost, when the Jap was advancing on every front and when our efforts seemed small and ineffectual, until the Jap was finally held and then turned back. No one can ever take from us the knowledge that we didn't drop the ball, and we did a complicated, unglamorous, thankless job hard and well."

The 11th participated in the Papuan Campaign from 30th July, 1942, until 23rd January, 1943, and in the New Guinea Campaign from 24th January, 1943, to 13th January, 1944, and leads the other Squadrons with its five Soldier's Medals and ten Purple Hearts.

898th SIGNAL

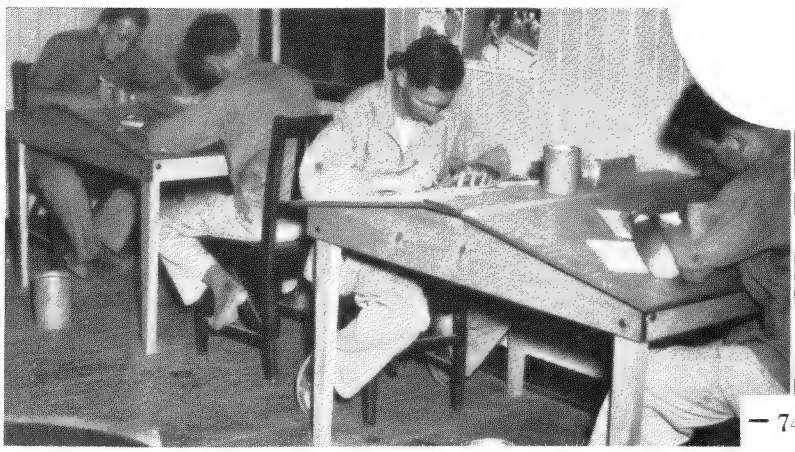

ON December 24, 1942, "898th" meant eleven enlisted men, wondering what the army had in store for them up its cold Ohio sleeve; on July 25, 1943, it was symbol for a team of 226 completely trained men on their way to do their assigned jobs. Between these two dates is the energy and ingenuity typical of our new army. It was each man's initiative directed into its proper channels by the Commanding Officer, Major E. C. Karst. Not that everyone saw it that way; it's difficult to maintain perspective when you've been on guard in a swamp for two successive nights or when your pup tent is pulled down for the third time because of poor camouflage; but while mouths complained, minds and bodies learned.

Most of this process took place in the woods around Lake Ponchartrain in Louisiana. Stationed at the New Orleans Army Air Base, the Company took advantage of all training opportunities the vicinity offered: radar repairmen were sent for two weeks to the mouth of the Mississippi River to learn the life of an Airwarning station; linesmen gathered knowledge and addresses while putting up telephone wire at Golden Meadows, La.; radiomen went to Mobile for repair experience.

During this time the Company was growing rapidly; its numbers increased by men hand-picked for education and experience. Rumors about moving were common, and the organization did move too frequently for some of the tongue-waggers. After four showerless days of sharing a swamp with clouds of mosquitoes the men were given a day to clean up and took off in truck-convoy for Camp Shelby, Mississippi. Finally the outfit settled down to spend the month of June, 1943, in a pine grove near Slidell, Louisiana.

1st Sergeant
MARTIN J. GALVAN

It was at these bivouacs that hard work, sport, and good food, in excellent proportions, put the finishing touches to the Company's training. From them are the 898th's most pleasant memories drawn: swimming at Shell Beach after a ten-mile hike, playing volleyball in a clearing among tall trees, singing at night, dancing at a party given the Company by the people of Slidell. When it was all over the men returned to their Air Base huts and wished they were back in pup tents.

Each movement had been accompanied by a "This is It" announcement from the Commanding Officer, and a few days after returning from the woods the expected repetition came. Early in July the Company left for the Port of Embarkation, a five-day trip made pleasant by the cooks who provided frequent chicken dinners and lots of ice-cream. On the 25th July, 1943, the 898th boarded its transport and began the long voyage.

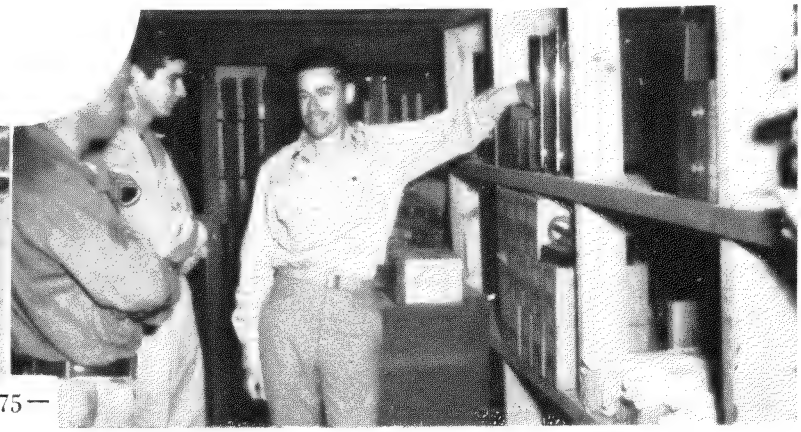

At its stations in the S.W.P.A. the Company rapidly adapted itself to the new conditions, and has been accomplishing its objectives with merit. Through its hands passes all the signal equipment to be used in the area serviced by the 81st Air Depot Group. New radios, radars, telephones, teletypes, and associated parts are received at the 898th Depot, stored, and issued as needed. Badly-damaged instruments are returned to it from forward echelons for repair. Maintaining a Signal Depot is a far cry from the days of infantry drill: the 898th has taken all the new problems in its stride, and is working hard toward that final "This is IT!"

Christmas Dinner

DECEMBER
1943

"Tricks of the trade" of night-club stewarding and Army mess administration: this is the Guiren-Ruano work which combines with a dozen experienced cooks to make the 898th Consolidated Mess Hall a success. Highlight of the season was in the last two months of 1943, when Major Karst volunteered his team to feed men working on the P-47 project. A total of 3,400 meals was served daily at eleven sittings, filling 1,700 men. Chocolate, fruit, and hot coffee were distributed at the hangars twice each night. Special cheers were for S/Sgt.'s Burkepile, Nelms, and Hand, and First Cooks T/4's Nuanes and Foret.

1124TH M.P. COMPANY

MAJOR JACOB SLINGERLAND
Commanding Officer

THE 1124th Military Police Company was activated January 1, 1943, at the Charleston Army Air Base, with a cadre of eight enlisted men under the command of Lt. Andrew J. Ford and other officers drawn from among the graduates of the Provost Marshal General School. Within two months upon reaching a strength of 356 the unit began intensive training with the aim of selecting the 257 men who would finally form the Company. This difficult process of improvement and elimination was carried out under the direct supervision of Lt. Norman T. Wilbur and T/Sgt. (now First Sergeant) Charles Blessing. Upon completion of "attrition" the product was, at the beginning of May, 1943, a unified organization of men physically, mentally and emotionally fit to carry out the rigorous duties of military police.

Five months after activation the Company was already at its overseas station and a member of the 81st Air Depot Group in Australia, with Headquarters at Eagle Farm and detachments for the policing of Archerfield and Amberley, as well as guarding our own installations within the city. When Major Jacob Slingerland assumed command November 23, 1943, he had very few problems to cope with as the Company was already in full swing of efficient operation.

Unlike the average organization of the Group, the duties of the Military Police Company call for constant 24-hour operation. As an efficiency expedient the total number of personnel available for guard purposes was divided into four equal shifts. In addition to traffic regulation, general maintenance of order and guarding—in itself so large a task as to require the aid of 80 civilians—the 1124th has assumed responsibility for fire control on the field. A fire department, headed by Sgt. Indovina, a fireman in civilian life with six years of experience, keeps constant vigil among the inflammables of the base.

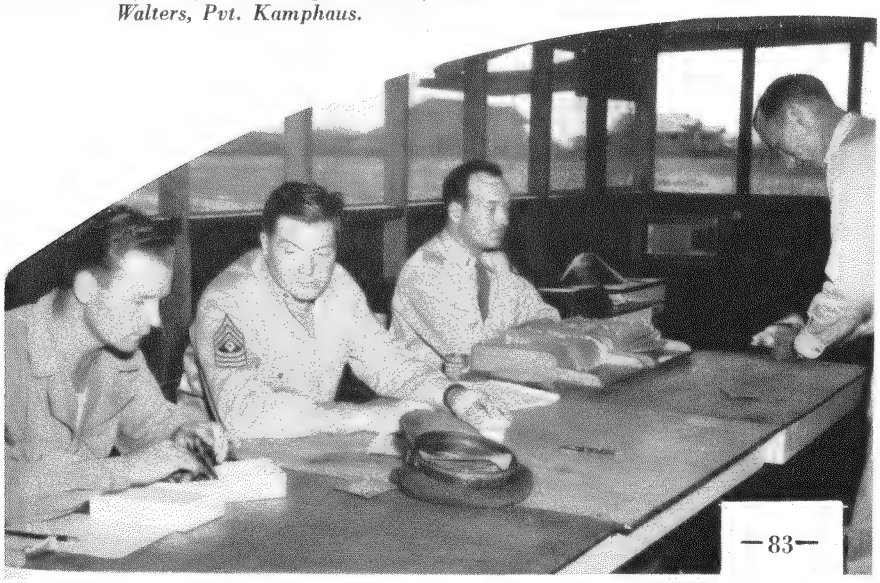

For the many thankless but essential jobs well done, without complaint or fanfare, the 1124th M.P.'s deserve special commendation, and to them goes the satisfaction of knowing that the Group appreciates their work.

On April 21, 1944, upon departure of the first boat carrying the advance detail of the 81st Air Depot Group, fifty 1124th men were on board to be followed later by the remainder of the unit to help police the way for our troops as far north as the rising sun.

1616TH ORDNANCE M.M. COMPANY

CAPTAIN RAYMOND K. HOXSIE
Company Commander

First Sergeant
WAYNE STILLWELL

IN its infancy as an Ordnance unit, having been a Q.M. adult until the War Department decided in December, 1942, to redesignate Q.M. medium maintenance companies as Ordnance organizations, the 1616th was in May of 1943 anything but a "rookie" outfit. Though not yet a member of the 81st Air Depot Group (they joined shortly thereafter in June), they had been in Australia and New Guinea long enough to get acclimated to foreign service and hard work.

Soon after assignment of personnel, the majority of whom arrived from New Guinea, Capt. Raymond K. Hoxsie joined as the new C.O. and Lt. Robert F. Logan as junior officer. With the arrival of 22 additional men in July, 1943, the Company was ready to function.

As its original purpose, a medium maintenance company is responsible for vehicle maintenance, the normal number of vehicles serviced being 600, minimum number 350, and maximum 1,200. Other responsibilities are parts supply and technical supervision of the work of lower echelons. In this theatre M.M. Companies have stepped higher into 4th echelon work, namely, unit overhaul.

Duties at Eagle Farm consisted of supervision and operation of the Special Vehicle Storage Pool, including all vehicle shipments, and all 2nd and 3rd echelon maintenance of Air Corps special purpose and Ordnance general purpose vehicles. Although operating under T/O strength and short of equipment, handicapped by lack of proper garage space and interference by rain, work was progressing creditably. By the end of November, 1943, the organization was performing repairs and supplying parts for approximately 1,500 vehicles assigned to 25 various Air Corps installations.

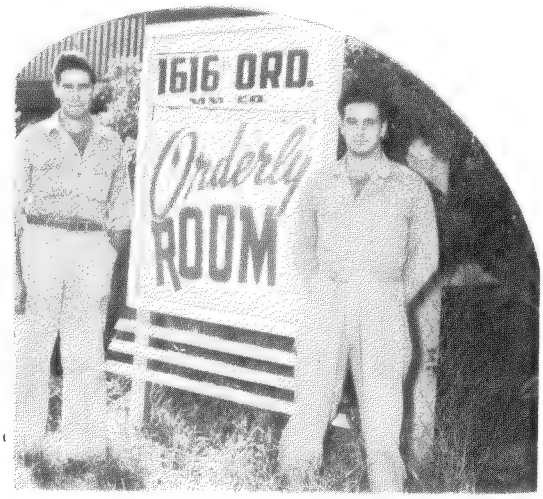

During the latter part of December, 1943, operation of the Motor Pool was given over to the newly arrived 1799th Ordnance S. & M. Company. The 1616th moved to the new maintenance hangar to devote full time to vehicle maintenance and repair.

Since the original members of the Company were participants in the Papuan Campaign when the 1616th was part of the 8th Service Group, they were presented the Citation Device for outstanding service and achievement.

Upon arrival to the advance base on April 30th, 1944, rumors started running wild about a new Table of Organization disbanding the Company. Credence was given to that rumor when in the middle of May orders were issued transferring men to the various Ordnance units, the remainder of the 1616th to be absorbed in the Ordnance Section of Headquarters Squadron. To those men disbandment meant losing a fine outfit; to the units that received them—an assurance that the 1616th spirit accompanied those Special Orders.

IN the wartime shuffle this organization, as others like it, underwent many changes before reaching its present stage. Originally a Medium Maintenance unit with Quartermaster, the 1799th was in May, 1943, still happily engaged in operating a base third echelon automotive shop at Army Air Base, Santa Maria, California.

Not having emerged from the training age yet, the Company was giving its men basic when they were not busy repairing trucks. All that stopped, however, with more than rumors about moving overseas.

Several weeks of bivouac and desert training at Camp Santa Anita supplemented the program in preparation for combat duty. Included was technical instruction for every man according to his classification number. The last few weeks were spent dropping overages in personnel, packing and crating, and granting of emergency furloughs.

On November 20, 1943, the Company boarded a troop transport for foreign duty and arrived in Australia December 13th. The men spent several days at Camp Doomben, then used as a staging camp, and on the 17th were marched to nearby Eagle Farm to be attached to the 455th Service Squadron.

Upon relinquishing by the 1616th Ordnance MM Company of the Special Vehicle Motor Pool at the end of December, the 1799th took over its operation. In addition to the enlisted personnel seven civilians were employed in the pool. In several months' time the unit released six civilians and functioned with military personnel.

To date the Automotive, Ammunition, and Supply Sections have been running the pool. The Armament Section is working on the maintenance of armament on the field. Another of the organization's responsibilities is rendering such assistance in Ordnance matters as may be directed by the Ordnance Officer.

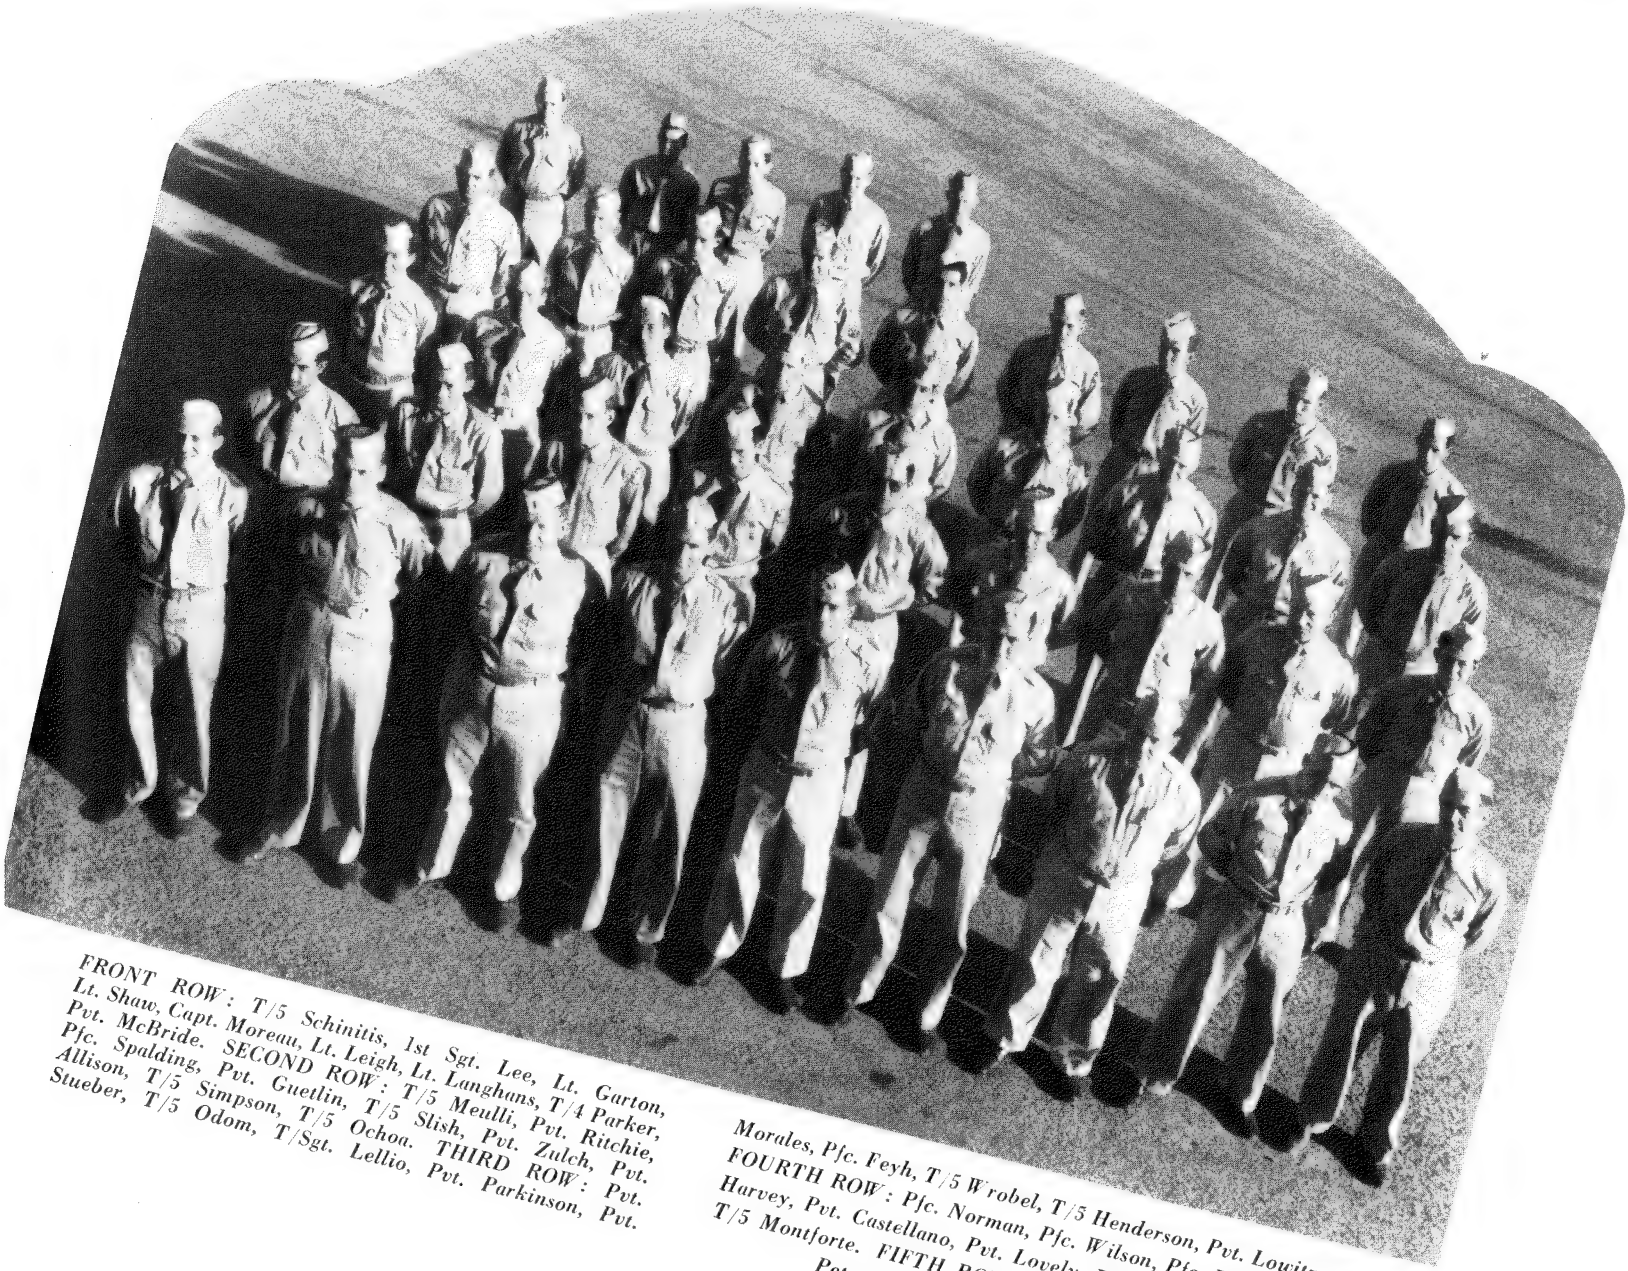

One of the youngest units of the 81st, the 1799th was nevertheless the "crack" attached outfit of the Group. In discipline and adaptability, the two most essential missions of an Army unit, this Company was second to none.

DETACHMENT, FIRST PLATOON
1912th Quartermaster Co.
(Avn.) T.

LIEUTENANT GEORGE M. ALLEN
Platoon Commander

The First Platoon, 1912th Quartermaster Company, was separated from its parent organization and activated as a separate detachment in Australia, December 5, 1942, with 45 men under the command of 1st Lt. John T. Fletcher. After two months with the 45th Service Group it was assigned February 16, 1943, to the 81st Air Depot Group, its duties being to transport equipment, supplies and personnel for units stationed at Eagle Farm. The detachment also sent details of men to nearby fields for special duty. April 7, 1943, Lt. Robert R. Austin, Jr., assumed command.

The work of these men was highly commended by their superiors. Col. R. J. Minty, Commanding Officer of the Group, said of them: "All indications, including reports from the Officer in Charge, the civilian supervising technical details, and the Commanding Officer of the R.A.A.F. unit at Charleville, indicate that the detail of men from Eagle Farm . . . should be commended. The camp and equipment were well taken care of and the camp was left in good condition at the time of departure. The men worked long hours, and without complaint. The job was completed considerably ahead of the estimate made."

On November 1, 1943, 1st Lt. George M. Allen was assigned to the detachment. It was under his command that the Platoon, of which 17 men served in New Guinea, began sending its "veterans" back to the United States on the rotation plan. Two men were sent in January and four in February, 1944.

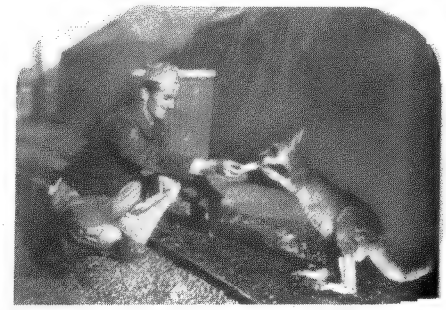

March 18, 1944, the Platoon was reassigned to the 1912th Quartermaster Company (Avn.) T., which established headquarters at Eagle Farm.

ENGINEERING

The middle of 1943 marked the beginning of phenomenal development in the Engineering Section of the 81st Air Depot Group. The appointment of Major Donald D. Steele as Engineering Officer on September 8th initiated a period of construction and unification unprecedented in the history of the Group. From this re-organization of loosely knit, separately operated Squadron shops emerged a compact body of twenty-five departments that was to send planes to forward areas faster than any army unit in the Southwest Pacific.

The primary duty of the Engineering Section is the erection and modification of aircraft arriving unassembled from the United States. Safeguarded by protective coatings, the ships are lifted off the transports and pulled to the field, where 1,200 skilled men clean, assemble, modify, repair, test, and do all work required to make the planes ready for combat.

Supervised by Capt. Cupp, the shops were headed by experienced mechanics from the 81st and 44th Repair Squadrons and assisted by personnel from the 455th and 11th Service Squadrons. The combined efficiency and speed of these shops have drawn repeated praise of the Commanders of this theatre:

"The speedy delivery of the fighter aircraft contributed directly to the successful conclusion of the Lae campaign."—General KENNEY.

"The delivery of these planes was a direct contribution to the success of the Cape Gloucester Campaign."—Colonel BROWNFIELD.

Between June, 1943, and January, 1944, there was an increase of only 195% in personnel, but in the same period the rise in output was 340%. Little wonder that the 81st, too, is proud of its Engineering Section.

ERECTION AND MODIFICATION

ON the runway a mighty 2,000 horsepower engine starts to cough and then rhythmically to purr and pulsate with power. A cloud of dust sends this cumbersome creature of the skies streaking down the runway lifting her bulk with the ease of a bird and quickly zooming into the blue horizon. She is not a beauty, but once in the air her appearance is forgotten. With her eight guns blazing death she swoops in at more than 375 miles per hour raking enemy strongholds with fiery lead. She is a symbol of supremacy as she flashes downward with the speed of sound. With her pilot she is invincible for she is the Thunderbolt. She is the P-47.

THE P-47 PROJECT

TOWARD the end of November, 1943, the 81st Air Depot Group was called upon by the Commanding General, Fifth Air Force, to accomplish the almost impossible task of erecting, modifying, and delivering well over a hundred P-47's in an incredibly short time. Higher Headquarters said: "We doubt if it can be done." The 81st replied: "We'll try."

What is this plane so much in demand and upon which so much depended?

Designed by Seversky for Republic Aircraft, the P-47 had already proven its worth as a fighter in the European Theatre and the Southwest Pacific. However, the task planned called for a longer range than it had at this time. A fuselage tank, known as the "Christmas Tree Tank," was designed, giving the P-47 the desired range for its mission in the proposed invasion.

A plan was laid calling for three eight-hour shifts and involving over 450 men per shift. On December 4, 1943, delivery was made of the first modified P-47.

Lt. General George C. Kenney made a personal visit to Eagle Farm and explained why a concentrated effort had to be made immediately to provide additional Thunderbolts for the fighting front. He was well satisfied with the progress of the project and did not hesitate an opinion about the fine work of the men who worked in constant downpours night after night.

The services of a large number of mechanics from organizations temporarily stationed in the Eagle Farm area were secured to make up the personnel needed. The addition of these men necessitated a hurried reorganization of the entire Engineering Section as well as of the messing facilities. Provision was made for additional housing.

Meals had to be provided every two hours during this period. Approximately 3,400 meals were served each twenty-four hours. Arrangements were made to serve hot coffee, chocolate, and fruit to the men twice during the night. During a three-week period, when Fighter Command was desperately calling for more modified planes, these men worked as many as 48 to 56 hours without sleep and then stopped only long enough for a few hours of rest. The officers and enlisted men deserve unqualified praise for the magnificent work. Their splendid cooperation, attention to duty, and disregard for personal comfort during long hours of continued rain, were an example of the spirit of the 81st Air Depot Group. Rank was of minor importance since Master Sergeant worked as hard as the Private.

With the completion of this project enough modified P-47's had been delivered to the fighting front to accomplish the task required, and another milestone had been passed on the road to final victory.

FIFTH AIR FORCE SERVICE COMMAND
Office of the Commanding Officer
APO 925

AG 330.13 — 1 January, 1944

SUBJECT: Commendation

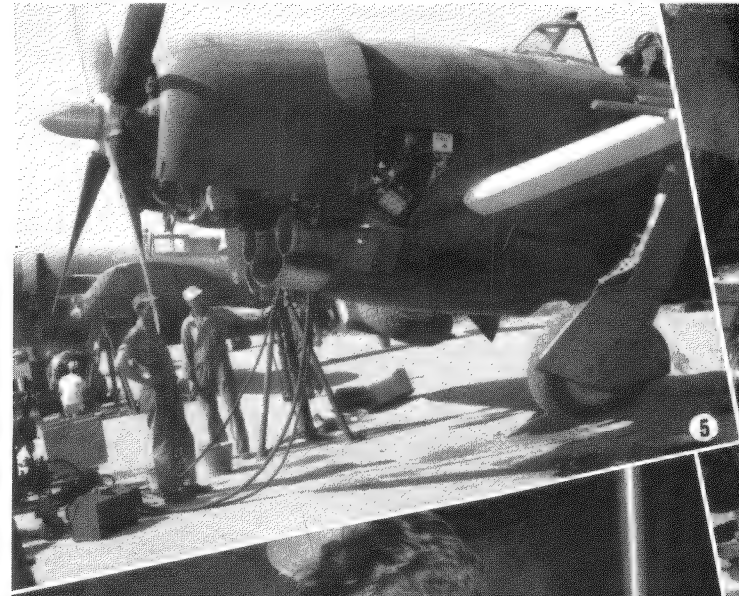

TO : Commanding Officer, Depot No. 1, Fifth Air Force Service Command, APO 923

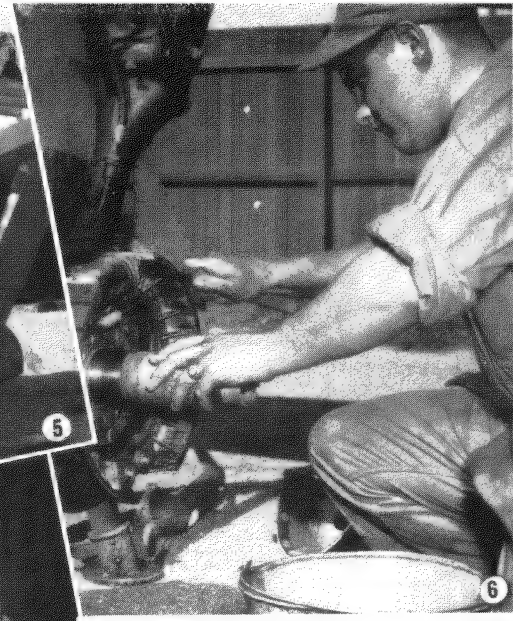

1. The Fifth Air Force Service Command can take justifiable pride in the record achieved in the erection, modification and delivery of P-47 airplanes during the month of December, 1943.

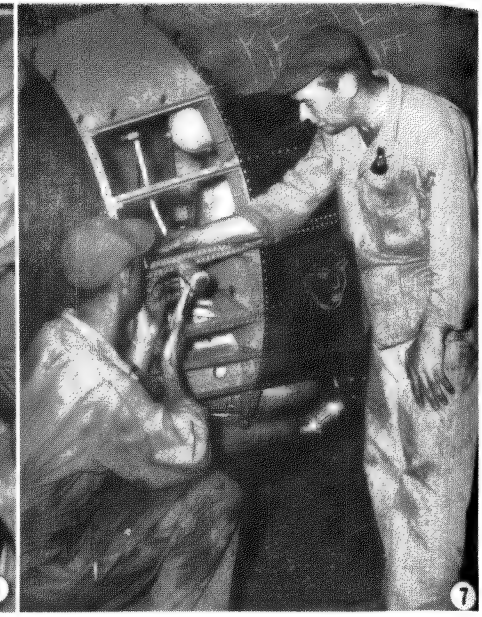

2. This accomplishment was made possible only through the cooperation of all concerned. Personnel worked extremely long hours, often in pouring rain, to complete planes that were urgently needed. The delivery of these planes was a direct contribution to the success of the Cape Gloucester campaign, and the record attained by the P-47's in this show is one of which all Air Force personnel can well be proud.

3. I would like to take this opportunity to commend all Fifth Air Force Service Command personnel who participated in this particular erection and modification program on an excellent achievement.

First and second echelon radio work, which includes installation, modification, flight check, and minor repair, was done by the fifteen men in the Radio Shop under Lt. Himes. They were drawn from the squadrons and from the 898th Signal Company and were under the immediate supervision of S/Sgt. D'Asta until he moved north and was succeeded by Sgt. Dyess. The shop worked in close coordination with the Signal Section, to which it sent all radios requiring major repair and from which it drew personnel for special projects.

2. One of the well-equipped benches in the radio shop with T/5 Schwartz, Sgt. Dyess, and T/4 Throopin at work.

3. T/Sgt. Spires modifying cable arrangement in the P-47.

4. Receiving and transmitting equipment in the P-38: Pfc. Shelton, Pfc. Gibson, and Pfc. Baker.

WELDING

Damaged joints, silver soldering on gas plugs, aluminum welding on gas lines, and other jobs requiring welding kept the fifteen soldiers and two civilians of this shop quite busy. They were under the supervision of S/Sgt. Newt and later of T/Sgt. Vasilauskas. These men did all the work on Col. Gunn's bomb racks and smoke tanks.

CABLE

Sgt. Browning replaced T/Sgt. Lippert (designer of the gun charging improvement on the B-25 and A-20) when the latter went north. The ten men in this department do all cable work on planes on the field.

Right: Sgt. Brenner, Sgt. Browning, and Pfc. Beckman at work in the Cable Shop.

HYDRAULICS

Sgt. Green became head of the Hydraulic Department when T/Sgt. Long moved with the 81st Repair Squadron. This department has eighteen men who adjust brakes and wheels, true brake drums, modify nosewheels on the F-5 and P-38, repair cylinders, and keep the ship's hydraulic system up to par.

PROPS

The original personnel of the Prop Department: Cpl. Clark, M/Sgt. Robinson, S/Sgt. Becker, Cpl. O'Hare, Pfc. Piaskowski.

When M/Sgt. Robinson returned home on the rotation plan in March, 1944, his place as head of the Propeller Department was taken by T/Sgt. Boyd. There are 35 soldiers in this section whose work consists of installation, inspection, line work, and the carrying out of all minor repairs. Major repairs are done at local Australian factories. During the special P-47 project in December, 1943, these men worked a 24-hour shift and completed 110 planes in record breaking time.

This unit operated the only shop of its kind in this area. T/Sgt. J. B. Davis was Section Head and his personnel comprised 15 enlisted men, one civilian, and three R.A.A.F. men attached for training. Work performed was teardown, overhaul, sandblasting, and repair of supercharger units. A training course of from four to six weeks was conducted for men from forward areas.

TECH. SUPPLY: Tech. Supply keeps a stock of all parts from screws and nuts to engines. It draws its equipment on requisition from the various supply warehouses of the Group. M/Sgt. Neal was the N.C.O. in charge of 39 enlisted men and seven civilians.

OXYGEN DEPARTMENT: T/Sgt. Colby (right) and Cpl. Bates in charge of the Oxygen Unit at work on cylinders.

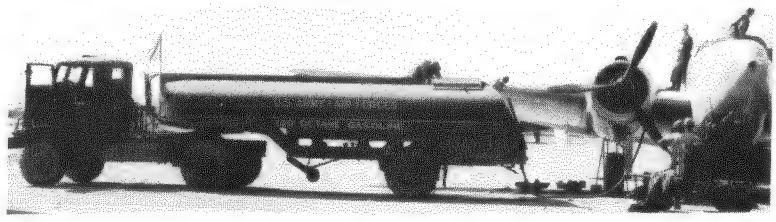

RUBBER REPAIR DEPARTMENT: Cpl. Ellinger, Pfc. Schuttlofel and Pfc. George at work in the Rubber Repair Department. This section handled the grading of tires, repair of fuel cells, life rafts, life vests and oxygen masks.

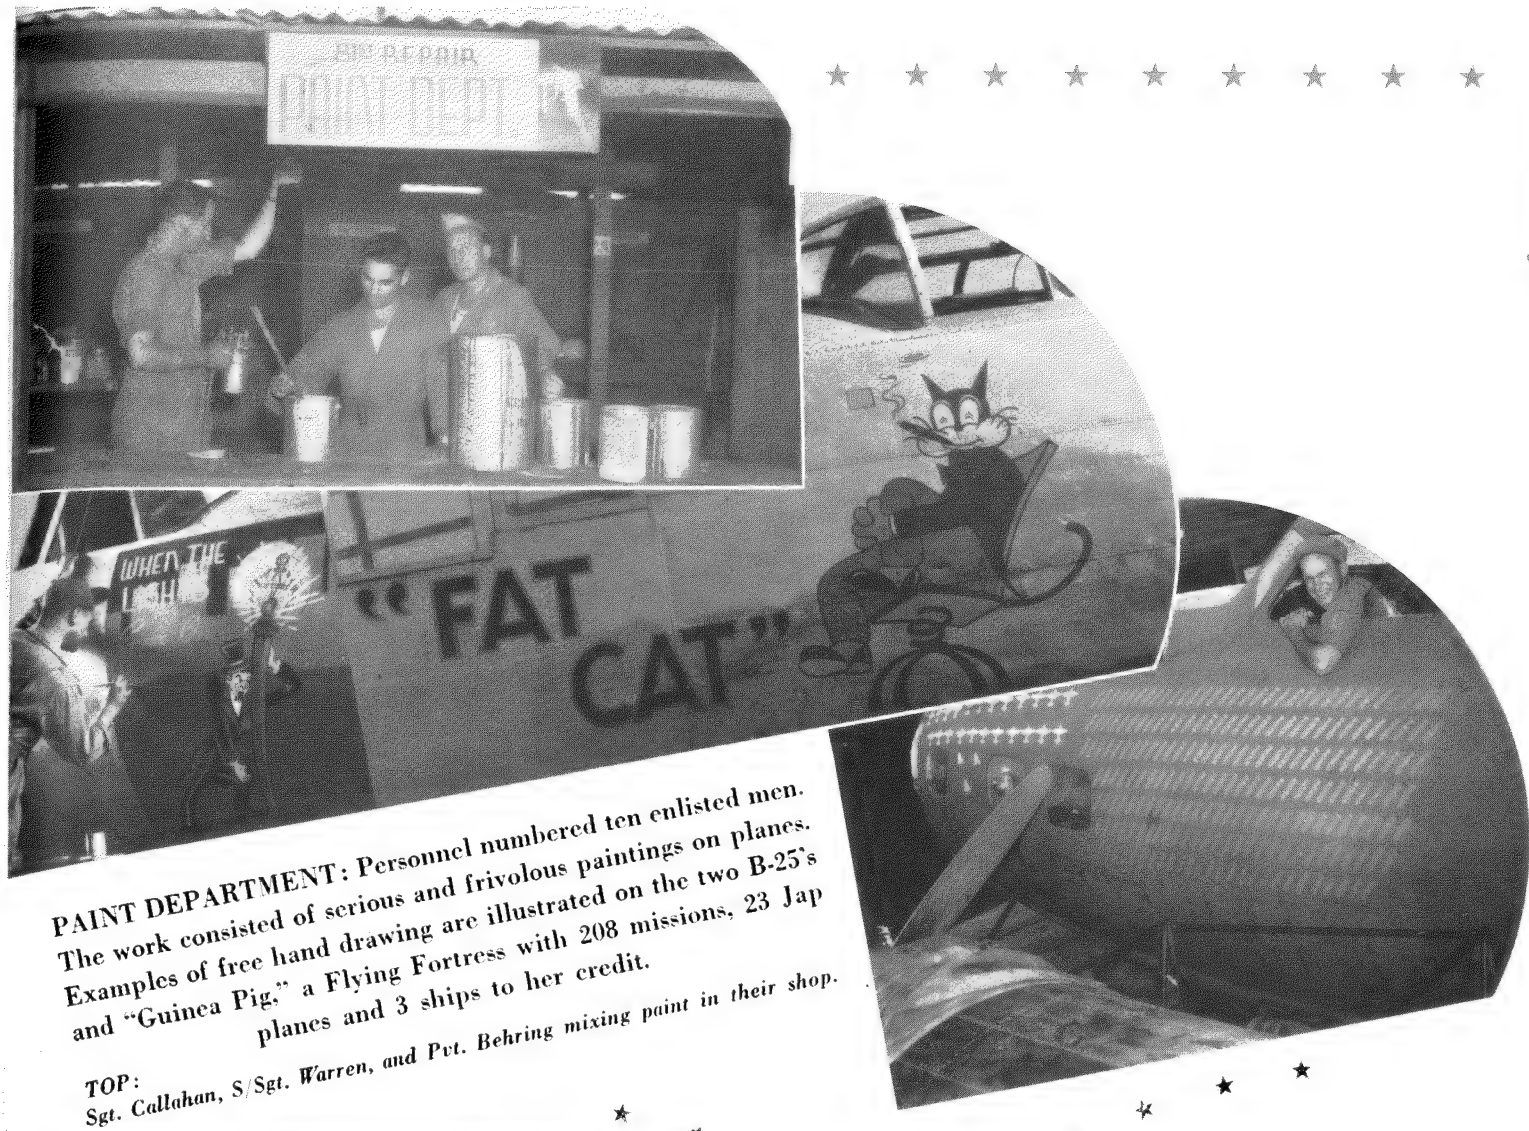

DRAFTING DEPARTMENT—AIRCRAFT: Pvt. Petak, Cpl. Einig and Mr. Wachsner working on plans for modifications on aircraft. Sgt. Medalie is Section Head.

FUEL SERVICING

PAINT DEPARTMENT: Personnel numbered ten enlisted men. The work consisted of serious and frivolous paintings on planes. Examples of free hand drawing are illustrated on the two B-25's and "Guinea Pig," a Flying Fortress with 208 missions, 23 Jap planes and 3 ships to her credit.

GROUP OPERATIONS

Center left: All planes must contact control tower by radio for landing or take-off instructions. Apparatus receives on three wave lengths, sends on one. Operates 24 hours per day to accommodate 1,500 planes that take off or land in an average month.

Bottom left: The traffic office keeps records of flying time, information required by pilots, maps, time of arrival and departure of ships. Acts as liaison between forward areas and Fifth Air Force. Transports pilots and directs activities of servicing, field maintenance, and night alert crews. S/Sgt. Elkins (in charge), Sgt. Newsome, Sgt. Wride.

ORDINARILY, we attach a great deal of glamor to combat flying, and rightly so. Little, however, is known of the pilot's pilot who goes through the paces day in and day out, and whose life is as much in danger as that of any stunt flyer. As one of them aptly put it: "We don't make the same mistake twice."

Planes are shipped from the States in parts, are assembled here, and for the first time test flown. The test pilot "opens her up wide" to see that all instruments are in working order under the most trying conditions. In brief, he tastes the wine for possible poison, this two to five hours per day.

The test flyer has to be well versed in every type of plane, bomber and fighter, compared with the combat pilot who knows one class better than any other since he flies his own ship all the time. Aside from more time in the air, the test pilot has four times as many landings and take-offs as the combat flyer.

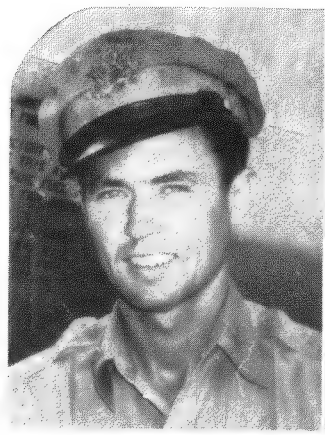

As may be expected, each of our pilots has his favorite plane and an individual reason for his choice. Generally speaking, the P-38 and A-20 are preferred ships because of the tricycle landing gear which gives them easier taxiing, take-off and landing, and twin engines to add to their security. Capt. Gutierrez has a very earthly reason for his choice—the A-20: "Because I'm a lazy pilot." Lt. LaBerge, in addition to the A-20 and P-38, favors the B-17: "Because I like her, that's all." Practically all of our pilots have one fear—"sweating" that a single-engined plane of the P-47 class will conk out on take-off.

As a matter of journalistic curiosity, the interviewer asked for a list of qualifications of a "good" test pilot. The best testing age was given as 25 to 26, physical condition must be perfect, and knowledge of engineering and of all classes of aircraft is on the required list; at least 800 hours of flying time, with an average 30 to 50 hours monthly time in the air, are other necessary adjuncts, according to the men who make them safe for the pilots up north.

LEGION OF MERIT — Awards ..... 1.

Captain William O. FARRIOR, (0427482), Air Corps, United States Army. For exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services in Australia from 20th January, 1943, to 25th September, 1943. Serving as test pilot and assistant engineering officer of an air depot group, Captain Farrior rendered invaluable service in the erection of newly-arrived aircraft, and in the flight-testing of new, overhauled, and modified planes. Long hours of difficult work, often with untrained mechanics, did not detract from his efficiency and courage in the hazardous work of the flight-testing of his planes in which he completed more than eight hundred and fifty test flights. On one occasion, with an enemy fighter plane that had been reconstructed from captured enemy aircraft, he simulated combat with many types of Allied aircraft, and added greatly to our knowledge of the enemy airplane. Captain Farrior's technical skill and exceptional ability in this assignment made a substantial contribution to our air operations.

IN MEMORIAM

And when the stream
Which overflowed the soul was passed away
A consciousness remained that it had left,
Deposited upon the silent shore
Of memory, images and precious thoughts,
That shall not die, and cannot be destroyed.

B-17

You hear the roar of propeller blades cutting their way through the icy thinness of the stratosphere. Up high in the heavens the winds howl like a thousand demons attempting in their fury to tear her asunder, but deep within this mighty bird beats a tireless heart of steel. The rhythmic throb of four powerful engines of 5,000 horsepower fears no devils of the sky. With her guns to protect her, and her brain manipulated by two trustworthy pilots, her course plotted by a master navigator, and a load of death that wreaks havoc with her enemies, what has she to fear? She is Queen of the skies. She is the Flying Fortress—the B-17.

A bolt of fire goes flashing past, zooming through the skies, quickly climbing higher and higher and vanishing into the blue beyond. A two-engined message of death with her 20 mm. cannon and four machine guns bristling from her nose, she is the scourge of the skies, hated by her enemies for powers in dealing out death in the battle of the air. She lives up to her name, "The Lightning," for she is a streak of lightning hurtling across the blue at better than 400 m.p.h. in a never ending search for her target. Not only a bolt of lightning but a missile of destruction is she, for the sight of her spells doom to those who cross her path. She is the Lightning—the P-38.

A double purpose ship, using both attributes with deadly accuracy and ability, is the A-20. This night-fighter-bomber has twin engines of 1,800 horsepower, each giving her plenty of speed and durability as she streaks down from out of the skies at upward of 350 m.p.h., spraying lead from her eight machine guns, dropping her 4,000 pound bomb load. With her crew of three she is used primarily to disrupt the enemy supply lines, attack troop concentrations, ships, and fixed installations. Performing her duties with thoroughness, she leaves a job well done. She is the Boston. She is the A-20.

B-25.

The plane that has made a name for itself, especially in the Southwest Pacific, is the well-known B-25. Little need be told of her deeds. Powerfully fortified with fourteen machine guns, a 75 millimeter cannon and a two-ton bomb capacity, she has blasted Japanese shipping from the seas in the now famous Battles of the Pacific. Sweeping low over enemy airfields at higher than 320 m.p.h., straf-ing and bombing, she will always be remembered by the foe. With two powerful 1,800 horsepower engines, and her gallant crew of five, she sweeps the skies dar-ing the enemy to come and do battle with her. She is the Mitchell. She is the B-25.

AIR CORPS SUPPLY

No engine's roar, no whine of lead,
No shrapnel bursting overhead,
No cloud filled skies to travel through,
No world below us, 'neath the blue.
No, none of these to catch our eye,
Ours is the job—Air Corps Supply.

No order comes too large or small,
We try our best to fill them all;
From tail assemblies, wheels and brakes,
To landing lights and armor plates;
From aircraft engines to a screw,
For bombers, fighters, transports, too.

There's parts to pack and goods to check,
Yeah, "pencil pushin'," too, by heck!
There's railway problems we must fight,
And boats to load till late at night.
We toil through heat and blinding rain
To load our air freight on some plane.

There's no use sitting 'round and crying,
It's up to us to "Keep 'Em Flying."
To you up front: we hope some day
You'll understand what part we play,
And in the end we think you'll see
We, too, have helped towards victory.

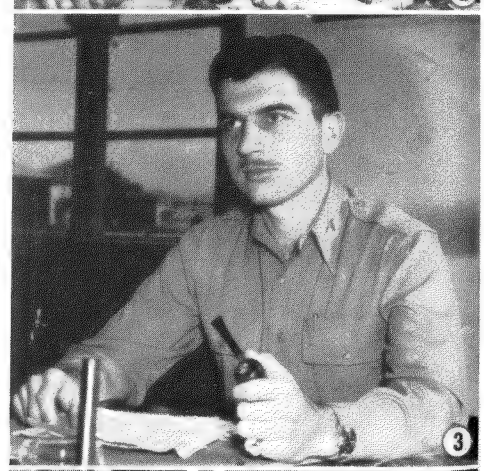

—Sgt. H. E. Bailey.

STOCK RECORDS

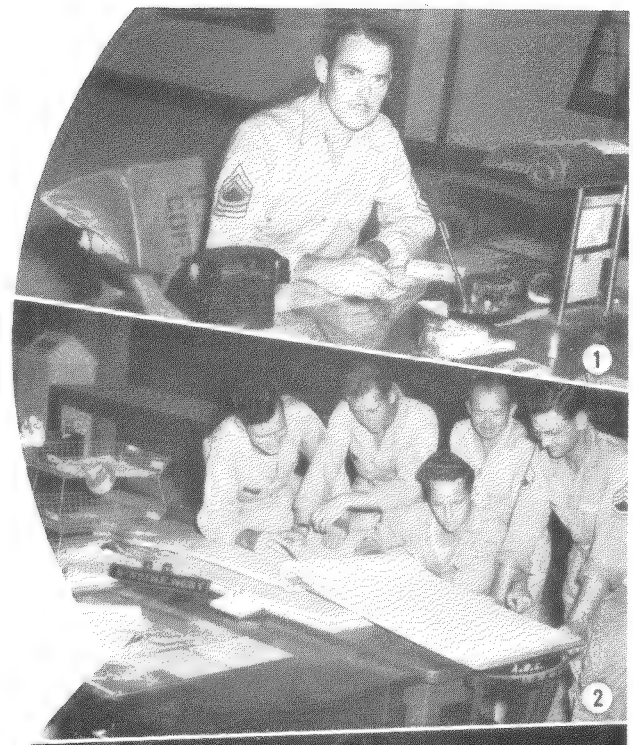

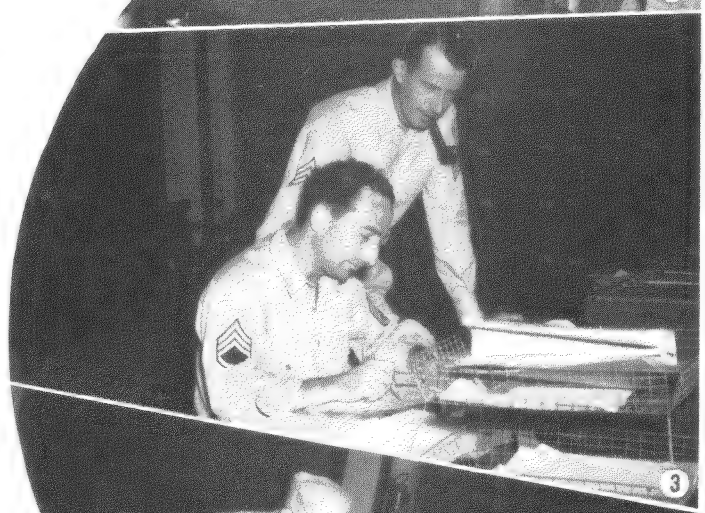

Paralleling and supplementing the warehouse's bin cards are the stock record cards kept at the Supply Section, Group Headquarters. These cards provide an instant check on stocks in all warehouses of the Depot. The 800,000 items can be located by class (there are thirty main classes) and by stock number. A requisition goes to the Supply Officer at Group Headquarters, is checked against stock record cards, and if the material is available it is coded. A shipping ticket is made out from the coded requisition for those items immediately available, and sent to the warehouse as authority to take the items from the bins. The items are then sent to the packing department.

WAREHOUSING

Office of Whses. No. 1 and No. 7.

Under warehousing comes binning, which is the placing of all items in their respective bins and posting the number received on the bin cards. A bin card is made out for every article stored and filed in the office of the warehouse. It shows how much of a given item is in storage and how many units have been received and issued to date. A specified quantity of each item is supposed to be kept in the bin, and when stock gets low it is from these bin cards that requisitions are made for replenishment.

SHIPPING

Depot No. 1 can boast of one of the largest and best Packing and Shipping Departments of any Air Force Supply organization overseas. T/Sgt. Reubinall, as N.C.O. in charge, has as his assistants: T/Sgt. Davis, supervisor of all packing and in charge of boat shipments; Sgt. Martin in charge of all air priorities; Sgt. Allen in charge of rail shipments; and Cpl. Witos in charge of local shipping by truck. Each section has its own packing, storage, and shipping area. In all 110 civilians are employed.

Pvt. Sensiba with tubes of oxygen, acetylene and carbon dioxide lined up for shipment.

At the Intransit Whse, Advanced Base: T/Sgt. Bowman, Cpl. Stull, Pvt. Saad.

Sgt. Novak removing oxygen mask from bin

IN the Shipping Department, the items are checked against the shipping ticket and carefully packed to protect them against breakage and bad weather. The boxes are shipped immediately, if possible, or are stored pending shipment. A master copy of the shipping ticket, showing number of pieces, weight, and cubage, is sent to the Shipping Office, where space is requested either by air, rail, boat, or truck, according to the destination and priority. As soon as shipment is made information copies of the shipping ticket are forwarded to consignee showing complete shipping information.

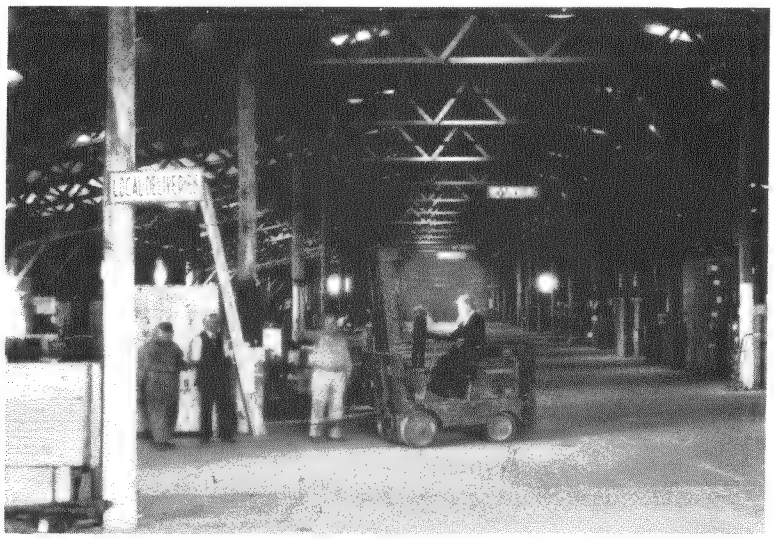

★ ★ ★ ★ ★

Shipping is probably the most interesting section of Air Force Supply, as the Depot is in continuous contact with all types of equipment, supplies, and transportation. It probably is largely responsible for the fame of the Group, inasmuch as all supplies handled by the Depot and issued or shipped to any organization must be processed through the shipping department. Theirs is a responsibility of getting the 9,000,000 pounds of supplies monthly to forward areas by the fastest possible means and in the best condition.

A PEEP at A JEEP!

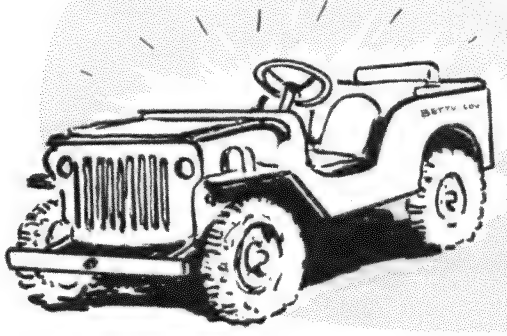

Just eight feet long
And five feet wide,
But it's really got
A heart inside.
It takes you where
You want to go,
Never ever
Does it say no.
Over hill and
Over dale,
Through the jungle's
Murky trail,
Through the swamps,
Across the streams,
Where the tropic
Jungle steams,
Across the bleached
And desert sands.
Through ancient bad
And timeworn lands.
Over mountains
And treacherous paths,
Never does
Old faithful lag.
Faithful ever,
Deceitful never,
It lives up
To its creed;
Rolling wheels,
With heart of steel,
Its purpose
Is your need:
So when you hear
That squeaky peep
Remember, it's
"Old Faithful Jeep."

SECURITY

Retreat at Eagle Farm.

Performing one of the most essential, wearying, and at the same time thankless jobs on the field are the former farmers, policemen, firemen, salesmen of the 1124th Military Police Company.

To guard the base effectively every hour of the twenty-four, the M.P.'s are divided into several shifts each of which walks guard for six consecutive hours. THE FIRE DEPARTMENT was organized in the middle of 1943 upon the recommendation and under the supervision of the Group Adjutant, Lt. Mayer. Sgt. Indovina, who had been a fireman in civilian life, was appointed Fire Chief and was given eight men from various units on the field to form the Fire Department. On November 23, 1943, Major Slingerland was appointed Fire Marshal.

Sgt. Indovina found it necessary to improvise and build his own equipment. To date he has one 1,000 gallon pumper and trailer pump capable of 250 gallons per minute, one 650 gallon truck with a trailer pump, and five Jupiter pumps capable of pumping 500 gallons per minute, supplemented by a crash truck with a 500 gallon per minute pump and emergency equipment.

To Sgt. Indovina fire battling is old stuff, but to his men who, in civilian life, were never able to get closer to a fire than the police lines would allow, the high degree of inflammability of 100 octane gasoline presents a constant peril and challenge. However, there are many instances to prove that when put to the test they all passed with flying colors.

TRANSPORTATION

The truck, the modern "Trojan Horse," has played perhaps the greatest part in building the United States into the mightiest power on earth. In war, when movement is the foundation of all strategy, the mechanized wheel has become the symbol of speed and victory. Wheels, rubber, gasoline, engines—when combined spell incalculable riches and power for us, terror and defeat for the enemy.

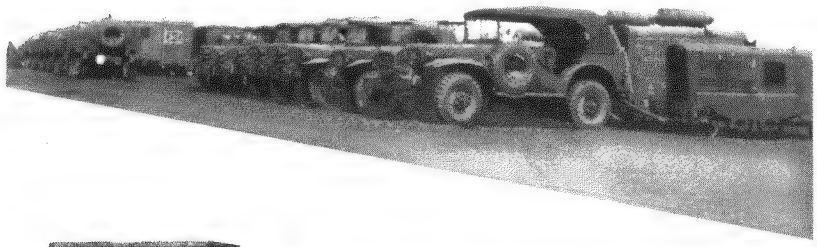

Eighty-first

AIR CORPS VEHICLE POOL

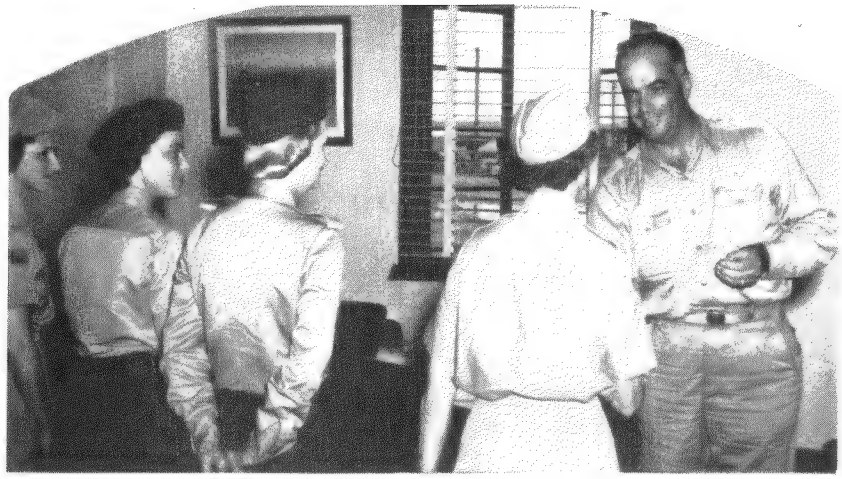

What role has the 81st played in fostering this game of trucking on to Tokyo?

We operated four huge motor pools where thousands of vehicles were stored, repaired, transshipped monthly. The consolidated pool was a model of self sufficiency, where sparkplug to 12-ton crane presented no problem to our master mechanics. Three hundred of them, distributed throughout the shops, garages, fuel servicing stations, kept the wheels turning along the roads finally to brake at some Jap entrenchment. To our boys in the forward areas went 60,000,000 lbs. of supplies monthly hauled on these selfsame vehicles to ships, planes, railroads.

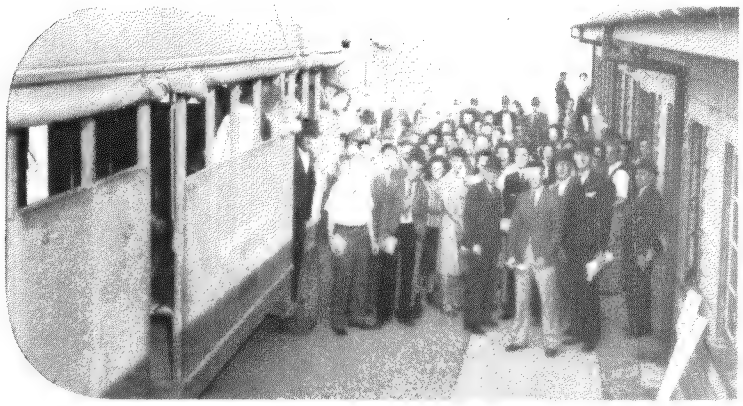

The immensity of labor involved cannot be adequately credited in writing. Where words fail the camera's eye records. Let us take a trip through the pools with our drivers, who make them roll along "Nip Highway," and see for ourselves.

THE second anniversary of the 81st concluded a great transition in the transportation system. One after the other, transportation officers—Lt. Thomas, Lt. Grimes, Lt. Keller—worked for greater efficiency and consolidation of the four scattered pools. The Heavy Duty Pool, Valley Pool, Ascot Garage, and Ordnance Special Vehicle Pool were last in the Group's campaign to have all facilities within easy reach. Miles of distance between them were reduced at the beginning of May, 1944, when all motor pools were moved to one central location at Eagle Farm.

The Ascot Garage was turned back to its civilian owner and repair functions were transferred to the immense maintenance hangars. Here personnel of the 1799th Ordnance Company worked in unison with the Air Corps mechanics on 3rd and 4th echelon repairs. Trans-shipment of some 1,000 vehicles monthly, in addition to maintenance of 400 of the Group's trucks and staff cars, kept the men constantly at the wheel.

With the completion of unification the executive personnel—Lt. Keller, T/Sgts. Downey and Hall, Sgt. Ivy—saw a dream realized. Theirs was a pool that was the showplace of Base Section 3 and the pride of the 81st.

The dispensary of the 81st A.D.G., giving an average of 3,000 treatments to 1,500 soldiers and 150 civilians each month, was the showplace of the Southwest Pacific medics. The five doctors, three nurses, and 44 E.M. were provided with the latest equipment for X-ray, optometry, urinalysis, and physical therapy, and had at their disposal a complete pharmacy under the supervision of a competent pharmacist.

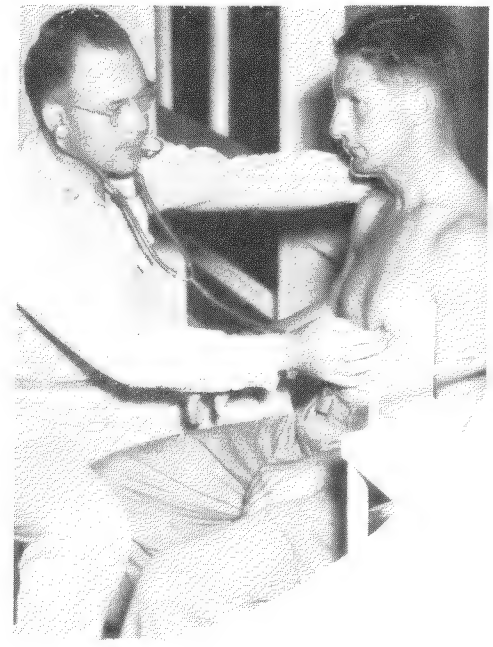

Five ambulances were maintained to transport sick patients to station and general hospitals and to keep a 24 hour vigil at the airport. Besides treatment at the daily sick-call, the dispensary gave physical examinations for drivers' licenses, flying cadet and O.C.S. candidates, and food handlers, provided inoculations against tetanus, smallpox, typhoid fever, cholera, and other diseases, and conducted the regular monthly inspection of enlisted personnel. A prophylaxis station was in operation day and night.

The 81st Dental section was staffed with two dentists and enlisted assistants, who had at their disposal the latest in dental equipment.

CIVILIAN PERSONNEL

EMPLOYMENT figures have fluctuated from just a handful of civilians when the Group began to function in May, 1942, to a peak of 1,705 in September, 1943, when they were in a majority as compared with military personnel.

Men outnumbered women five to one. With the exception of a small number of assistant storekeepers in warehouses and sewing machine operators in the parachute section, women employees were confined to office work in Group Headquarters and the warehouses. Men's work consisted of handling, storing or shipping of supplies, driving and repairing of vehicles, and constructional jobs. Limited numbers were employed as clerks, technicians, and in semi-administrative positions.

Women's National Emergency Legion (W.N.E.L.'s), an organization of civilian volunteers, had twelve drivers assigned to the Group for the staff cars, which transported executive military personnel on official business tours. Out of an average weekly pay of five pounds, the W.N.E.L.'s purchased their own uniforms and were subject to tax deductions as well as other civilians.

Employees were generally more than satisfied with working conditions, particularly since the U.S. Army paid much higher rates than any firm in Australia. The "baby" of the outfit naturally thought that "Uncle Sam" was a wonderful boss. He paid her £4 a week since he thought she was worth it, and saw no reason for following the Australian practice of giving her 15 shillings a week because she was only fifteen years of age.

The average wage for six eight-hour days was £360 per annum, with a minimum £120 paid to messengers and a maximum £888 earned by the supervisors. The Australian government deducted tax averaging 15 shillings per week, extremes ranging from 14 shillings to £5 weekly.

By and large, the relationship between civilian and military personnel has been most cordial, and many lasting friendships were formed during the two years of association. It was with earnest regret that alliances, both business and social, had to be broken upon departure of the Group. Nevertheless, the work of our faithful civilians will not be forgotten by the 81st.

THE LONE RANGER

The history of the 81st at Eagle Farm would not be complete without mention of the "Lone Ranger," Charles J. Kenyon, a kind typical bushman, with a winning smile which readily endeared him to everyone on the field.

When the 81st began the pioneering job of carving an airfield out of undeveloped land, Kenyon was the Divisional Chief Air Raid Warden for the Eagle Farm area.

At that time the Group was experiencing considerable difficulty in keeping the straying stock off the air strip. Kenyon voluntarily helped with the task, and consequently a request was put in that the roving cowboy be appointed Ranger. He was duly sworn in February, 1942.

Kenyon found it quite exciting in the early days keeping the cattle off the field. He organized general round-ups among the test pilots who followed on bicycles and in jeeps, the Ranger leading the posse on his gallant horse. Later stockades were built and the Ranger impounded any stray cattle at the direction of Col. Minty and Col. Monay, who realized the seriousness of wandering stock on an important airfield.

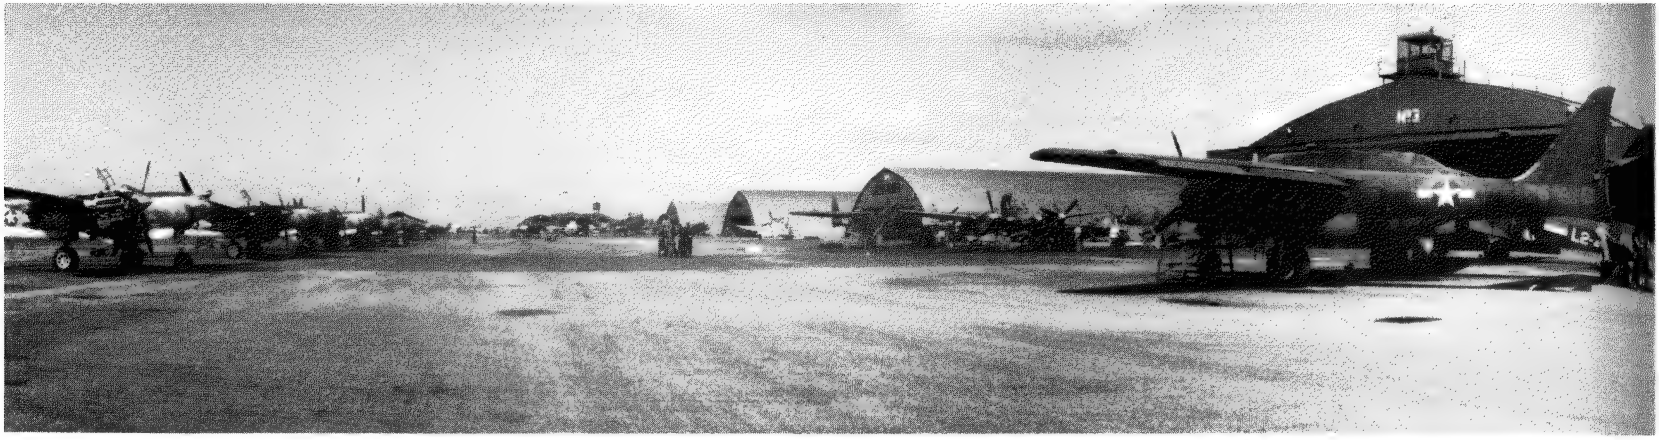

The old cowboy is a well-known figure in the cattle country of Queensland. He was previously a drover and stock dealer of many years' standing. As working manager for the biggest cattle drive undertaken in Australia, he led 13,000 head from the Northern Territory to New South Wales. The trip took twelve months, and was one of the many successful drives which followed in later years.

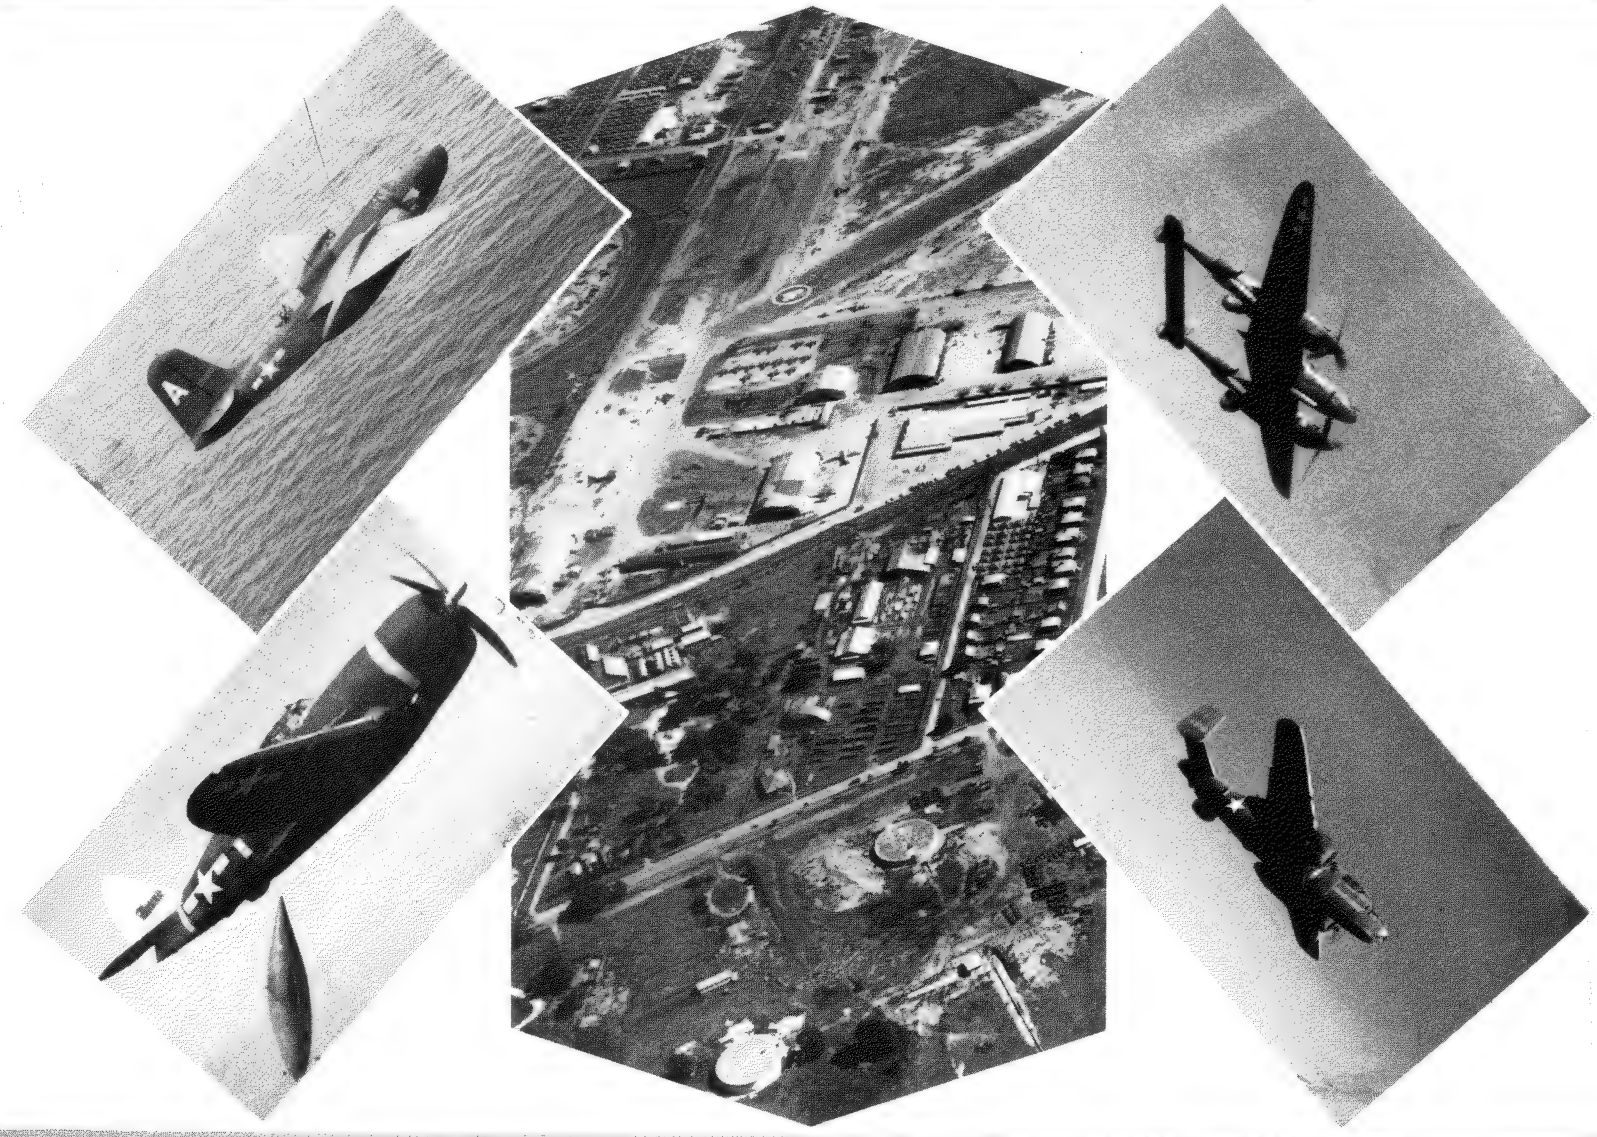

Today, at the age of 60, Charles Kenyon is as much of a fixture at Eagle Farm as the Air Corps, and in the future, when we pause to reminisce about the war, one of our most vivid memories will be the "Lone Ranger" on his beloved horse, "Teddy Roosevelt."

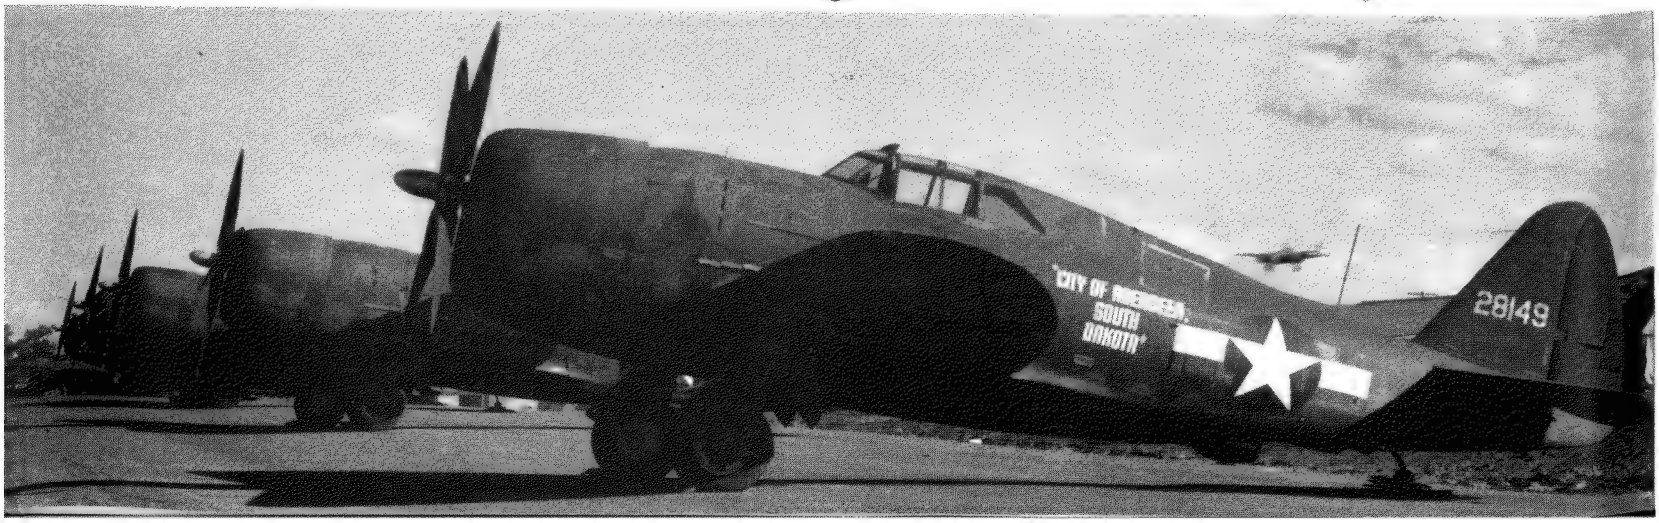

THE 81ST A.D.G. BABY

Robin Quantrill, at age 14½ when hired by the Group as typist, was the youngest member of the 81st. Now at 15, besides being still titleholder as infant of the organization, she boasts a promotion to assistant stenographer. Eight months of schooling for her present job did not stop with the beginning of employment in September, 1943. She consistently pursues her studies, and has attained shorthand speed of 120 words per minute and typing of 50 words. Elocution is her favorite extra curricular activity, and in a recent competition for girls 14 to 16 at the Queensland Patriotic Eisteddfod, Robin won first prize. Her favorite sports are swimming and tennis.

Farewell Party for Col. Minty

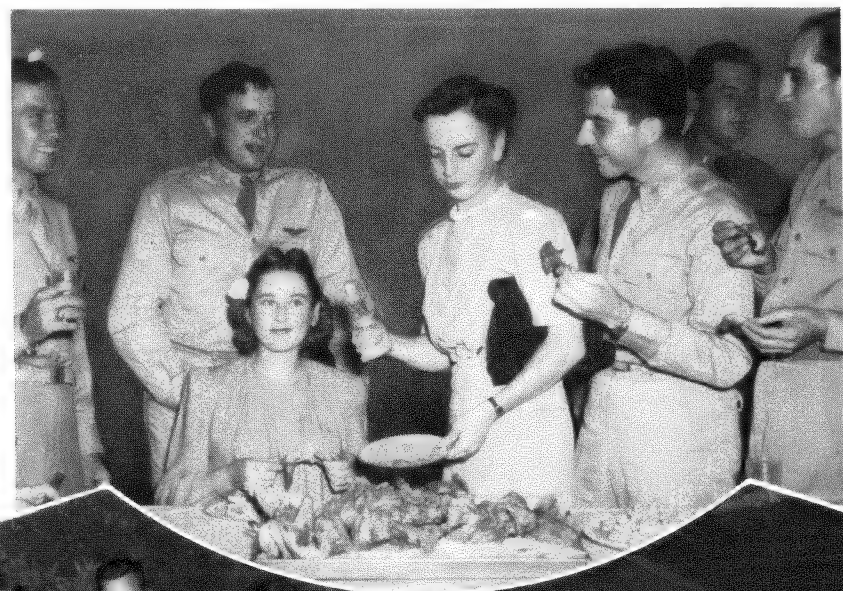

★ ★ ★ 7 FEBRUARY, 1944 ★ ★ ★

When Colonel R. J. Minty, Command Pilot, came to the 81st Air Depot Group as Commanding Officer on August 10, 1943, with several thousand flying hours to his credit, he told the local reporter that his favorite fighter plane was the P-38. Then he smiled broadly and added, "But I find it hard to squeeze into one." West Pointers of the class of '23, on hearing this comment, probably began to reminisce about their school days, for while a student at the Military Academy, Col. Minty won letters for his outstanding work in football, basketball, track, and wrestling. Though not as slim as in former days, he's still no pushover.

He was born in Lansing, Michigan, and attended grade school there until his folks moved to Iowa, where he completed high school, excelling in the same sports for which he was later awarded letters at West Point. His favorite subject was mathematics, which sharpened the analytical mind required in a military leader, who must grasp all the implications of any situation in the shortest possible time and make faultless decisions immediately. After graduation from West Point he was stationed for a course at Brooks Field, Texas. He learned how to fly and, as he says, "had my share of thrills and, like most pilots, cracked up a few ships." Col. Minty was for several years at Wright Field, Ohio, in the Equipment and Power Plant Branches, where he worked on the original blind landing apparatus. Before shipping overseas he was for two years in charge of the Engineering Section at Ogden Field, Utah.

As Commanding Officer of the 81st Air Depot Group he established a reputation among the men as a strict disciplinarian of the old army school who would not tolerate malingering of any sort. At the same time those who were familiar with his work regarded him with the utmost of respect as a man who did not hesitate to fight for the welfare of his troops.

After establishing the 81st as the most efficient organization of its kind in this theatre, he was appointed Commanding Officer of IV Air Service Area Command, February 6, 1944, and left to assume command after a "bang-up" farewell party tendered him by his fellow officers at the home of Col. Monay.

1ST THREE GRADERS' CLUB

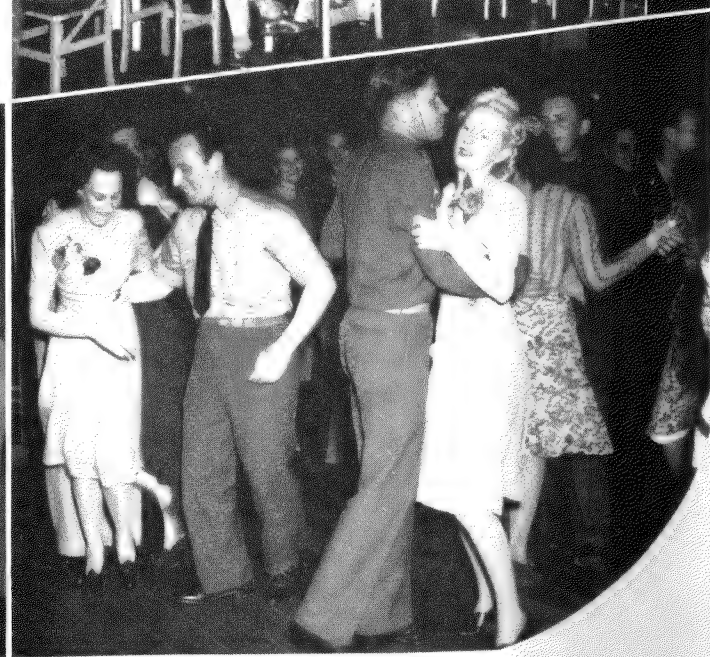

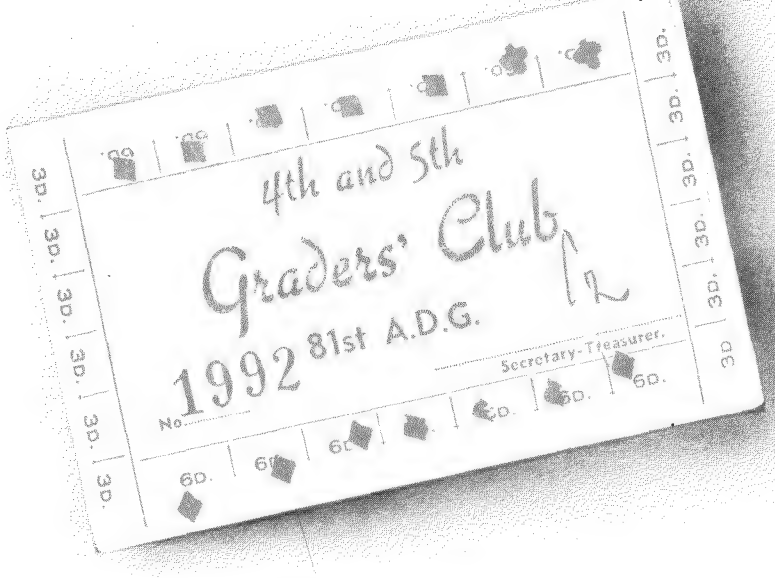

After opening of the 4th and 5th Graders' Club at Eagle Farm, the Valley Club, which had hitherto admitted all non-coms, closed its membership to all but wearers of the many stripes. Their Friday night dances became exclusive but classic, especially since the major portion of the weekly ration of 120 gallons of beer was consumed. Moreover, members imbibed their allotment of hard drinks as chasers. Squadron parties on Thursday nights, too, were hilarious affairs. The Privates nurtured charitable hangovers Tuesday mornings after their evening of fun when nobody but the clean sleeved were allowed in—gratis; and they didn't go thirsty either. In general, the Club made famous that classic "Never Again."

Combined with genuine night club atmosphere of dimmed lights and modern decorations, the N.C.O. Club, started as a dream that materialized after Chaplain Urquhart worked eight months to build it, became the pride of the Farm. Started as a 4th and 5th Graders' Club, it was also made available shortly after opening in March, 1944, to the lonely Privates, who were admitted two evenings a week without dues. Dances were nightly occasions, as were refreshments—beer, soft drinks, and sandwiches. Together with the friendly air surrounding the huge hall what more could any enlisted man ask?

The OVERSEAS PRIVATE

WITH the increase in ratings in 1942, the Private became almost extinct in the Army since four out of five enlisted men were either non-commissioned officers or technicians. Nevertheless, the plebeian among the G.I.'s was not entirely forgotten. Financially, he was made happier with the boost in base pay from $30 to $50 monthly, which, added to the 20% for oversea duty, more than fulfilled his needs. Dependency allotments relieved his worry about family at home.

Socially, as well, his prestige soared in the 81st. Menial work such as K.P. was eliminated when the Group hired civilians to work in the kitchens. Guard was performed by the M.P.'s, and the stripeless were free after duty hours to attend to their functions other than sentrying. Both the 4th and 5th and the First Three Graders' Clubs admitted Privates two nights during the week gratis. They danced them and made them forget their G.I. troubles through liquid refreshment.

To save many words, the staff hired Pvt. "Rookie" (Rucki), an average Private of the Group, to guide the reader through a day at Eagle Farm and immediate vicinity.

GOIN' HOME

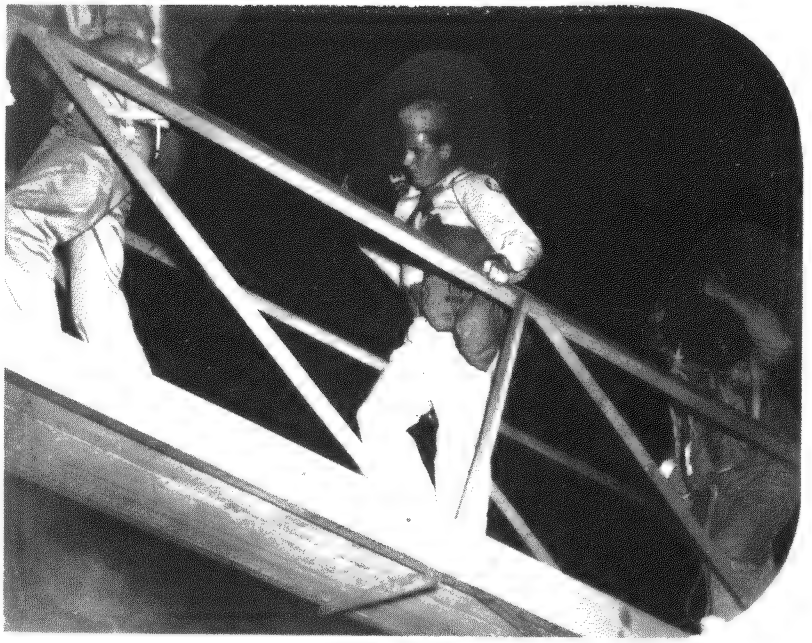

The ROTATION PLAN

Effective March, 1944, the Rotation Plan was instituted, returning men to the United States from this theatre. Under the new policy men with (1) eighteen months' service overseas, (2) whose mental and physical condition indicated greatest urgency for return, and (3) who within the above categories desired it, were to be sent back home.

Fifth Air Force Special Order No. 54, dated 23 February, 1944, announced the good news to eighteen men from assigned and attached units of the 81st A.D.G. that they were the first to realize the fruits of the return plan. Awaiting transportation, they were transferred to Camp Ascot to embark in the middle of April for the Golden Gate "before '48."

The second rotation contingent—the April allotment—consisting of one officer and thirty-nine enlisted men, transferred to the Rotation Detachment to await return as soon as a boat is made available. At the time of writing (May 11th) they are still waiting and yearning.

To them a bon voyage from the whole Group.

Wishful Wishing . . .

Wishing will make it so,
You've heard the poets state.
I can't complain because all mine
Came true right up to date.

When I was a child of nine,
I often used to play
A game of war, and wished that I
Could be a soldier boy some day.

The draft board must have heard my wish,
I'll never know just how,
Because the man said, "Raise your hand,
You're in the Army now."

I'm in the Army now, that's true,
As pretty as you please;
And so I made another wish:
To get shipped overseas.

Wishing will make it so,
The poets always say.
I'm somewhere in Australia
Ten thousand miles away.

I'm going to make just one more wish,
And pray it's not in vain:
Please send me home today, and I
Will never wish again.

81ST Sweethearts

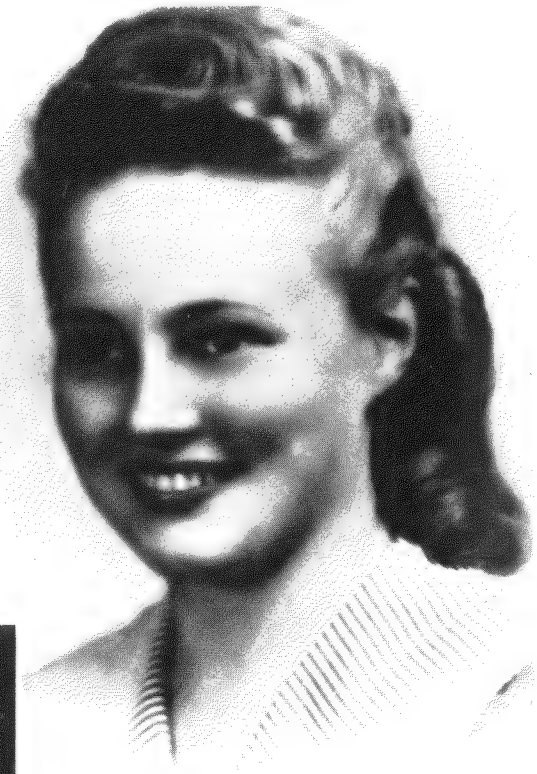

"A thing of beauty is a joy forever;
It's loveliness increases; it will never Pass into nothingness;" . . . KEATS.

It brings hopes and gives us an incentive for fighting and a motive for return. The man who can boast: "You ought to see her," is usually the better soldier.

Of the sixty entries submitted, the judges selected these as most typical of American womanhood.

Carol Murray, Youngstown, Ohio, friend of Pvt. Felix LeRoy.

Velma Buehner, Camden, Ohio, wife of S/Sgt. Everett Buehner.

Hazel Johnson, Imperial, Calif., sweetheart of Cpl. John C. Lundy.

Photo Section

It is no more than a click of the shutter, yet professional army photography is a trying job. There are nerve racking hours spent improvising since equipment is not always as readily available as your problem; there is boredom of laboratory work, and the danger in aerial flights.

To the five men of our photo unit go the laurels for patience coupled with hard labor. To them we owe thanks for all photographic material in this book and all visual historical records of our Group—work long remembered after all of our attainments will be forgotten.

To S/Sgt. Krause and his men, the Yearbook staff is grateful.

"Depo Echo"

In September, 1943, a group of men, representing the various units of the 81st, met to organize a newspaper. The first issue, edited by Sgt. Cadwell, appeared November 1st. Gradually the little paper became the favorite of the enlisted men. Circulation: 700 copies bi-weekly, allowing one paper per four men.

SUNSET

A breeze is wafting fragrant blossoms
Down the dusty way,
Their beauty soiled, which was but lately
Innocent and gay,
Beneath the morning dew.
A golden hush comes stealing swiftly
Like the touch of hands,
And heralds dusk anew.

The golden sun is slowly sinking;
Even as it dies
Its beauteous moment comes, and
Glory-drenched before our eyes grey,
Gloomy clouds are
Swift transformed to silver smitten things
That light the sky
With beauty like a flash of angels' wings:
It ever brighter grows.

A honey-tinted mass of gold has changed
The roseate hue to one of flame,
And all the West is shot with glory through,
That radiates o'er the sky.
A rosy flush o'erspreads the gold,
Departed is the sun,
And starry realm of twilight reigns supreme:
Now day is done and velvet night is nigh.

—Anne Arden.

HEADQUARTERS
FIFTH AIR FORCE SERVICE COMMAND
OFFICE OF THE COMMANDING GENERAL
APO 925

5 May, 1944.

AG 201.22

SUBJECT: Commendation.

TO : Commanding Officer, 81st Air Depot Group, APO 923.

1. The departure of your organization from this area being imminent, it seems most fitting and proper that the splendid services rendered by the 81st Air Depot Group while stationed at APO 923 should receive justifiable recognition.

2. Although I have only recently assumed command of the Fifth Air Force Service Command, I did as Commanding General of the 54th Troop Carrier Wing, have the opportunity to observe some of the results of the work of your organization. The record and work accomplished by the 81st Air Depot Group has been outstanding. The 81st Air Depot Group moved into the APO 923 area approximately two years ago with only a minimum of trained personnel. However, by superior leadership and skillful organization and training, this organization grew and expanded, and now is probably the largest of its kind in any foreign theater of operation. Your ability to meet deadline dates on erection and modification of aircraft that were needed by tactical units, has certainly contributed magnificently to the success of these tactical operations in this theater.

3. I would again like to repeat that the splendid work accomplished by your Group has been most gratifying, and I have full confidence that when you move to the forward area, you will be able to accomplish the even greater tasks that lie ahead.

4. It is my desire that the contents of this letter be brought to the personal attention of the members of your command.

Paul H. Prentiss

PAUL H. PRENTISS,

Commanding.
